Jobs for Veterans Get Top Federal Priority

WASHINGTON (AP) — Voice of the growing concern for the growing number of Vietnam veterans returning home to the unemployment rolls. President Nixon has ordered an intensive, six-point federal effort to get jobs or job training for ex-service men.

—This is an effort which I consider to be of the highest priority in federal manpower and training programs," the President said Sunday, "and of such importance that every available program should be used to the maximum."

In a letter to James D. Hodgson naming the secretary of labor to direct the job-finding effort Nixon wrote:

Burden of Fighting

"I am greatly concerned at any denial of civilian job opportunities to these young men who have borne the burden of fighting."

"I am also deeply concerned at the evidence that the most serious problem is experienced by those with educational deficiencies or other disabilities."

Hodgson told newsmen 370,000 Vietnam-era veterans don't have jobs, an unemployment rate of 10.8 per cent for those between 20 and 29 years of age. He said the jobless rate for that age group among nonveterans is 8.4 per cent.

The six points Nixon outlined for Hodgson:

- See that all contractors and agencies under federal contract list all job openings with the U.S. Employment Service.
- Broaden the employment training and counseling program operated by the Defense Department for servicemen in the last weeks of their duty.
- Veterans who haven't found the job training and manpower programs for three months or more should be given special consideration by the Labor Department.
- Increase cooperation with available.
- Broaden the National Alliance of Businessmen to open up industry even more to job-hunting ex-servicemen.
- Work to increase the number of veterans in special on-the-job training and manpower programs.
- See that "each returning veteran (is) reached and served by this effort" to make training and employment services more upon resources at hand.

Examine Problem

Nixon also told Hodgson to work closely with James Oates, chairman of the Jobs for Veterans Committee which has been examining the problem in recent months.

The Labor Secretary indicated he would take full advantage of Nixon's call "upon all government agencies to draw fully on resources at hand."

In fact, said Hodgson, if current resources are short "We'll ask for more money... no matter what it costs."

The extra money will be well spent, Hodgson said, in fact "it's a costs savings" since each new job found means less money spent in unemployment compensation.

White House Meeting

Drug Abuse Under Discussion

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Nixon called key administration officials to the White House today along with seven U.S. ambassadors as part of a lengthy examination of drug abuse in American society.

Called to the meeting were Treasury Secretary John B. Connally, Ellsworth Bunker, U.S. ambassador to South Vietnam, told reporters at Andrews Air Force Base Sunday night the Saigon government is aware of reports that marijuana and hard drugs are increasingly available in South Vietnam, and is working on the problem.

Besides South Vietnam, the United States has urged the other countries to step up efforts to cope with the drug problem and the illicit traffic in narcotics and marijuana.

Hitchhiker Accused

Driver Shot Five Times

FOND DU LAC — An attempted murder charge is expected to be filed today against a 23-year-old Green Bay hitchhiker who authorities allege pumped five bullets into a Pewaukee father of seven who gave him a ride Sunday night.

Fond du Lac County sheriff's authorities identified the shooting victim as Louis E. Ascher, 38, who, although he was struck in the head with three slugs, is in "very good condition" today at Waukesha Memorial Hospital.

The suspect in the shooting was taken into custody by two Wisconsin state patrolmen about 10 p.m. Sunday at State 47 and Evergreen Drive, a half mile north of Appleton. The shooting is believed to have occurred about 9 p.m.

Fond du Lac and Outagamie County authorities gave this account of the incident.

Ascher was alone in his station wagon, returning from a fishing trip to Green Bay, when he picked up the hitchhiker at U.S. 41 and U.S. 10, about two miles west of Appleton. That was early Sunday evening.

Ascher drove the man to Fond du Lac County Trunk P, a half mile east of County Trunk C, two miles west of U.S. 41, in the Town of Eldorado. At that point, the hitchhiker reportedly talked about paying Ascher for the ride, but instead whipped out a revolver and emptied it at the Pewaukee man.

Three of the slugs, from what is believed to be the hitchhiker's .32 caliber revolver, struck Ascher in the head. Another slug hit him in the elbow and a fifth in the hand. The sixth shot apparently missed.

The shooting suspect then took Ascher's car, leaving him in a ditch. Ascher, according to Fond du Lac County authorities, walked a quarter of a mile to a farmhouse and summoned help. He was taken to St. Agnes Hospital in Fond du Lac, where two bullets were removed from his head. He then was transferred to the Waukesha Hospital early today where a specialist was to remove the third slug.

A state policeman, who had been alerted recognized the car and license number while patrolling near U. S. 41 and State 125, just west of Appleton. He radioed for assistance from another state patrolman and together they stopped the auto shortly after it turned off U. S. 41 near State 47. The suspect offered no resistance. Seven Slain In Suspected Drug Center

DETROIT (AP) — Seven persons were shot to death and an eighth was wounded critically today in what homicide officers called execution-type slayings in a suspected dope pad.

Four women who were slain were found with their arms tied behind them. All eight of the victims were found in the first-floor living room of the two-story dwelling.

District Inspector James Barron, who headed the police team at the slaying site, said a quantity of suspected narcotics—believed to be heroin—was found in the house along with a dozen handguns and long guns, none of which appeared to have been fired recently.

None of the dead was identified immediately. Police identified the wounded man as Robert Gardner, 28, who was taken to Henry Ford Hospital with two gunshot wounds in the chest. His condition was listed as critical.

Off-duty homicide detectives were called in to aid in the investigation of the multiple slayings which occurred on Hazelwood Street, just off predominantly black 12th Street—the focal point of the 1967 Detroit riots.

Homicide officers expressed belief the mass killings were the latest in a string of about 25 narcotics-connected homicides since the first of the year.

They had said previously a power struggle is under way in the Detroit narcotics underworld.

Humphrey Addresses Nation's Mayors

Fund Shortage Violates People's 'New' Civil Rights

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — Sen. Hubert H. Humphrey said today that lack of money in city government is causing the biggest violation of civil rights in the nation. He outlined eight programs aimed at solving the problem, including a new bank for low-cost loans.

Humphrey's remarks were prepared for delivery to more than 400 mayors gathered for the 38th annual meeting of the U.S. Conference of Mayors.

Sen. Edmund S. Muskie, D-Maine, and Housing and Urban Development Secretary George Romney also were to address the conference today.

"We must guarantee every American, no matter where he lives, certain basic minimal services and standards," Humphrey said. "Clear air, well-

"New" Rights

Before his speech, the Minnesota Democrat told newsmen these services are "the new civil rights."

"The biggest violation of civil rights in the nation today is the breakdown in city services," he said. "When city services break down they always do it first in areas where the poor live. When these services are cut back, who is hurt? The poor in the inner city."

He characterized as his new "long-term solution" the creation of a national domestic development bank "to give cities, towns, counties and states an alternative and supplemental source of capital funds."

The bank, which he has proposed in a Senate bill, would eventually provide $150 billion in long term, low-interest loans. Its operations would be financed by bonds sold to the federal government and private investors. Dividend income from the bonds would be partially exempt from federal income tax to encourage investors.

World Bank

The bank would be similar to the World Bank, Humphrey said. "If we can help build a better Rio de Janeiro, we can help build a better Philadelphia or Detroit or New York."

He also called for speedy enactment of legislation to return federal revenues to state and local governments with no restrictions on how it is spent.

President Nixon, Muskie, Rep. Wilbur Mills, D-Ark., and

Humphrey with Rep. Henry Reuss, D-Wis., all have advanced plans for this kind of general federal revenue sharing.

Humphrey emphasized that he did not care which plan was approved by Congress.

"We cannot worry about authorship or partisanship," he said. "The cities are in desperate shape."

Highway Trust

Humphrey also proposed that revenue from the federal highway trust fund used to finance interstate highways be opened to the cities, "to pave city streets and build new streets, to create parking areas and to help finance maintenance costs," as well as for urban mass transit.

His five other proposals were:

- A federal assumption of welfare costs now borne by state and local governments.

- Full funding of existing federal domestic aid programs and prompt release of domestic funds appropriated but as yet unsent by the Nixon administration.
- Consolidation of several current categorical—or single purpose—federal aid programs into block grants to give local governments more discretion over use of the money. However, he said some categorical grants should be maintained, "so we don't lose the sense of national direction and priorities."
- Restoration of a healthy economy through a reduction in unemployment and inflation.
- Tax reform by state governments to replace sales and property taxes with progressive income taxes.

The latest arrests came this morning when police moved into the park, where several youths had returned after a foray into the downtown area. They arrested about 30 holdouts there. The males arrested in the park had been drinking heavily, apparently with liquor looted from the store, police said.

Police also moved on a residence in the area where a volunteer medical aid team—dubbed MASH—had been treating wounded persons.

Neenah Highway Project Gets Informal Go-Ahead

OSHKOSH — Winnebago County officials and representatives of the city and Town of Neenah agreed informally this morning to try to get overall approval for a railroad overpass and extending Breeze-wood Lane from Harrison Street to County Trunk A.

The meeting this morning was called by County Highway Commissioner Robert Graf in hopes of getting an informal agreement for the construction of the $800,000 project, to be built concurrently with the state's interchange on U.S. 41.

The City of Neenah's finance committee had agreed to go along with Graf's proposal, paying 88 per cent of the local municipality share. Kenneth Heinz, Town of Neenah chairman, expressed a doubt that

Executive, Plan Agency Face Winnebago Panel

OSHKOSH — Facing up to a coordinating committee feels it petition asking for a county should have a major portion in executive and reconsidering the formation of whatever political council replaces the two problem will occupy part of the now squabbling over planning county board's attention Tuesday for the region.

Other business, on the agenda, smooths park committee plans for Community Park's operation and a boat landing at Boom Bay and settles the Guidance Clinic in its new home with furniture and hopefully a full-time medical director.

Planning agency scuffles were left unresolved at the last board meeting when the supervisors voted to stay with Northeastern Wisconsin Regional Planning Commission. Northeastern does not meet federal requirements, however, and that means federal grants will not be forthcoming.

Neenah Mayor Roman Hauser gathered six of the eight supervisors from his political turf and asked them to reconsider the vote. They agreed to do so if a new regional planning agency could be cobbled together by Jan. 1.

New Committee

Toward that end, the coordinating committee will ask board approval for the formation of a principle and another group committee to forcefully represent county interests in the possible consolidation of Northeastern and Council of Governments' staffs. Approval will be asked for Orrin King, board chairman, to gather two more county men and join with like groups from Outagamie, Calumet and Fond du Lac counties.

Since the counties end up footing the planning bill, the Town of Neenah taxpayers would commit to 12 per cent of the project's cost.

Graf's original proposal included $400,000, or half to be paid through state FAS (Federal Aid Secondary) funds. The remaining $400,000, the county, town and city would share with Winnebago County picking up $75,000 for construction of the railroad bridge.

The remaining $325,000 would be shared on an 88 per cent city ($288,000) and town, 12 per cent ($39,000.)

Although there was general agreement for the need of the project, Heinz said it would have to be approved at a special town meeting, which could be called "within 30 to 40 days."

The general strategy worked out during this morning's session includes the bringing of a resolution before the Neenah city council, possibly as early as Wednesday, for an informal commitment to the project. A similar resolution will probably come before the county board at its July session.

Neenah City Council President Michael G. Ellis suggested the timing, so that the Town of Neenah could have the city and county approval as it goes to its special meeting.

Graf suggested that he have the decision from all the municipalities by the end of July so that the state could include the overpass and extension planning in the U.S. 41 grade separation design.

"If the state doesn't have a decision by then, it will probably revert back to the original plan which was to swing Breeze-wood Lane onto Harrison Street, Graf said. Heinz, who agreed to the need for the railroad overpass as a major east-west artery, said he doubted that such a project would be accepted by the townspeople.

"The general attitude seems to be 'why build a road for the city, when it will be in the city within 10 years?'

The town chairman cited the resounding defeat by the town residents of participation in the reconstruction of Tullar Road. However, Heinz said, "It's a very desirable thing and maybe I'm mistaken. We will try to make it as palatable and as easy to pay as we can."

Graf said the state project was scheduled for December, 1972, bid letting. This could give the county, town and city two budget years to spread the cost and lessen the impact for any given year.

Plant Size Causes Debate

NEENAH - MENASHA — A heated meeting is very likely to overcome the sewerage commission's small window air conditioner tonight as the commission and industry wrestle over who will control the size and type of the new treatment plant.

Plant Manager Ronald St. Laurent said he expected Consoer & Townsend to be present. They will be asked to comment on industry's engineers, the Roy F. Weston Co., proposal to build a 30 million gallon a day (MGD) plant.

If industry wins, the commission will again delay a decision to go ahead with a 40 MGD plant that would cost perhaps as much as $6 million more, or so industry claims, than that proposed by C&T design, but which would meet treatment standards.

The Weston report is only an interim one and that the final one won't be in for another month. Each month of delay costs taxpayers $300,000 in increased construction costs due to inflation.

LWV Stand

The League of Women Voters of Neenah-Menasha will present a letter backing the 40 MGD solution. Its letter cites the Department of Natural Resources recommendation that the plant be that size. The DNR controls approval for any grants the cities might expect to help defray costs of adequate treatment, now rising up to the $20 million neighborhood.

"Though a smaller plant may meet the needs of today — on dry days — can we avoid the responsibility of tomorrow — on wet days?" the League asks about industry's 30 MGD-plant ideas. "To assume that, should the smaller plant prove to be inadequate, it could always be enlarged or corrected, is to allow today's situation to be repeated. Enlargements and correction are not easily achieved."

Adams' Letter

Mayor James Adams of Menasha, gets some political licks in at the expense of Governor Lucey over the sewage plant question in a letter to him today, requesting he pay attention to a previous letter. The first letter asked the governor to do all he could to get accurate, non-political answers out of Paul Didier, chief of the industrial waste water section of the DNR, concerning the size and type of plant which would be most assured of funding approval.

Lucey has not seen fit to respond, beyond a post card saying the May 3 letter was being forwarded to the governor, according to Adams.

The mayor shouts the fiscal blues: "Industrial expansion has been minor, commercial development has deteriorated. Inflationary increase in valuation has outstripped true increase in valuation."

Industry, now that it will have to pay an equitable share of sewage treatment costs, and the property taxpayers of the city cannot absorb the cost of this pollution abatement program without facing bankruptcy. Maximum state and federal aids are a must so we may pay the increased corporate, and personal income taxes in your new budget, and absorb additional state revenue losses under your revenue sharing plan."

Adams goes on to complain about the demands of the populous southern part of the state, especially Milwaukee, which have "hamburger pocketbooks and steak appetites," over the needs of the Valley.

Freeze Sought on Pay for Teachers

NEENAH — The Neenah board of education's personnel committee has again re-emphasized its feeling that teachers should maintain their present salary schedule for the 1972 calendar year.

During the second bargaining session between the personnel committee and the team representing the Neenah Education Association (NEA), James Clark, schools business manager, pointed out that holding the line on the present salary schedule would mean an average increase of 3.3 per cent.

He said that the total package that the teachers have requested amounts to an approximate 15 per cent increase. During May 20 meeting, the NEA asked that the base salary of $7,450 be increased to $7,889.

Clark said that by holding to the present base of $7,450, the schedule would still provide an average 3.3 per cent increase for each teacher.

The hold-the-line position by the school board, along with other budgetary demands, would mean a 3½ mill increase. It was pointed out

Lewis Precourt, representing the NEA, said that the teachers' group was aware of the economic situation, but he said he felt their requests were not out of line with recent negotiated agreements in the area and nation.

However, he said the teachers would reconsider their request and be prepared for further negotiations on Tuesday.

Each year the negotiators try to complete the agreements in time for the school board to put the expected costs in the budget. Both sides said they hoped a master agreement could be reached no later than Sept. 15, 60 years ago and negotiations completed by Oct. 1, the deadline for submitting the annual school budget to the fiscal control body.

The statement of intent regarding the code of ethics presented by the teachers was thoroughly gone over, and there because of the strike. "You just don't know," he said. The subcontractors can't do much until the others come back, he added. He said the carpenters are out but the other workers were at their jobs. Fowler said plans called for being in the addition around the end of the year. All work was going along according to a revised schedule at Clintonville Community Hospital until the strike began, R. J. Platte, administrator, said. The revised schedule called for putting the addition into operation around July 1. Platte said sheet metal workers, masons, carpenters and painters have finishing work to do before the facility can be moved into. Work was slowed down, he reported.

Not on Time

At West High, Joseph Desautel, construction coordinator, said that the project definitely won't be completed on time but no action has been taken on measures to accommodate students next fall. Real serious effects will be felt if the strike continues through this week, he added. The other workers are running out of areas in which to work, he said, noting the reasons have laid off some men already. William Sirek, director of the Fox Valley Technical Institute, said he hadn't begun arranging for other space or longer hours for classes. The school isn't too concerned yet, he added. Two of the buildings of the $5.6 million complex are slated for completion this fall, with about 400 students to be using it. The final completion of the complex is next May. At Neenah, the new high school won't be seriously hurt for about a month. The seriousness of the effect depends on the length of the strike, a spokesman said. The Kimberly-Clark Research Center, one of numerous commercial projects affected, apparently isn't being affected seriously as other trades continue work. The Neenah parking ramp is supposed to be completed by cold weather and no serious concern exists yet that this project won't be met. However, some work is being slowed, and there

STP Is Only Oil Thickener, Report Claims

NEW YORK (AP) — A consumer magazine's claim that STP, an automobile oil additive, is little more than an oil thickener was enough to halt all trading on the stock on the American Stock Exchange. The story resulted in a rush of trading orders Friday, and the STP Corp. stock never opened. It closed at 53 1/2, down 4 1/2, on Thursday after first word of the article. According to Consumer Report, STP increases the thickness of oil by 50 per cent when hot and its use could invalidate a new-car warranty. Such an increase in thickness, the magazine said in an article to appear in the July issue, is the equivalent of increasing the oil's viscosity weight by two grades — from 20 to 40, for instance. "If that's what you want, it's simpler to fill up with heavier oil in the first place," the report asserts. "Our tests show that the addition of only 10 per cent STP can change the viscosity of a new car's oil to a considerably thicker grade than certain auto manufacturers recommend," it added. Consumers Union, a nonprofit organization that publishes the magazine, said this kind of oil treatment may violate a new car warranty. The union plans to bring its finding to the attention of the Federal Trade Commission. A spokesman for STP, which is marketed by race-car sponsor Andy Granatelli's STP Corp., said the company would not comment on the report until Monday.

Boatman Apparently Loses Challenge to Sea Vote to End War Is Likely to Fail

SEATTLE (AP) — As a boy, he once sailed a small boat across the Baltic Sea. Now 25-year-old James Brinton has been lost at sea, the victim of what his stepfather calls an obsession to be the first to cross an ocean in a kayak.

"I used to be a seaman, and I know the power of the sea on a little boat, but there was nothing anyone could do to stop him," said James D. Moore.

"Jim always loved the water, but he just got possessed with an idea, and once he got it, that was it."

Brinton's capsized 17-foot craft was discovered intact by a fisherman in the Pacific Ocean about four miles off Washington's Olympic Peninsula early Sunday, 24 hours after the Seattle youth left LaPush, Wash., for what was to have been a 7,000-mile, three-month journey to Japan.

Two aircraft, a Coast Guard cutter and a local fishing boat searched in winds to 23 miles per hour and six-to 10-foot seas, but late Sunday Coast Guard spokesmen said there was little chance Brinton would be found alive.

Moore said he shared the official view, with some qualification.

"Jimmy was a marvelous swimmer; he always excelled at whatever he did," he said. "He had a wetsuit and a lifejacket, and if he was in the suit and pointed in the right direction, he could have made it to shore."

The kayak, he said, was crammed with provisions for the trip. Special food had been collected by a Seattle dietitian to save space, but Moore said the craft still appeared to be overloaded.

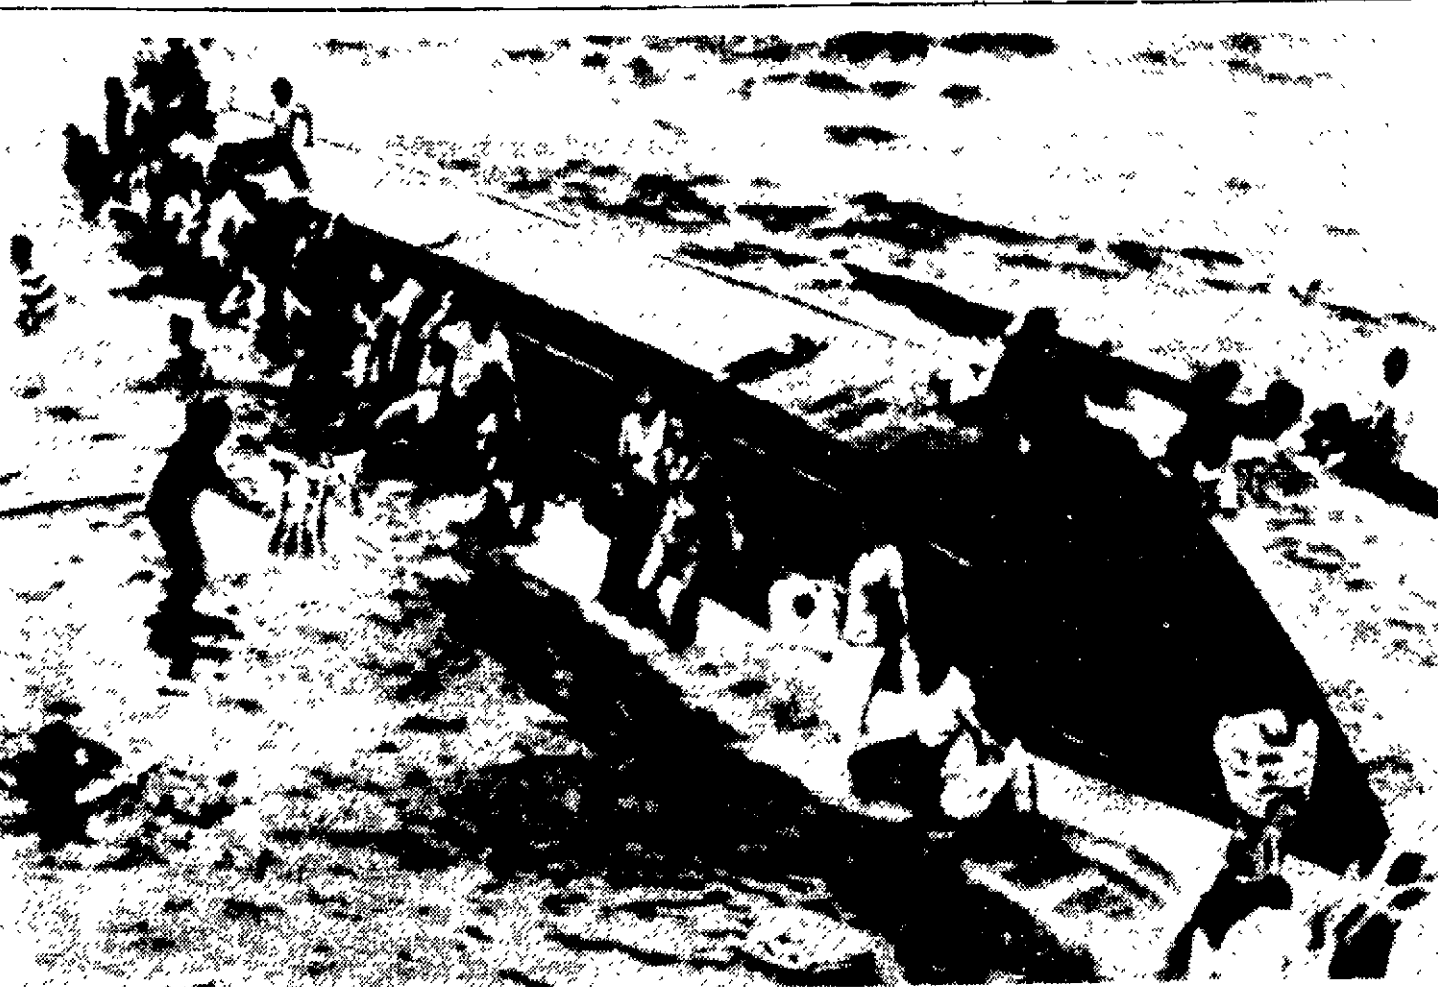

"He has been going out and practicing with the kayak, but never with all that weight," he said. "He should have tried the boat out in different conditions."

"Outwardly, when he left, he looked very confident, but how he looked when he got out there on the water and saw how loaded he was, I don't know," Moore said.

Brinton spent most of his teen-age years boating and swimming in Puget Sound, Moore said. On several occasions he swam ashore from swamped sailboats. He was an Eagle Scout by 15.

At 16, during a European trip, he went on a sailing expedition through the Baltic to the North Sea. He served a tour of duty with the Army in Vietnam, and was a student at Seattle Community College with plans to become a teacher.

"He was an experienced sailor," Moore said, "but he hadn't spent much time with kayaks. But he was set on going, and that is what he did."

Survivors Cling to the hull of the overturned ex-cursor boat Saturday in Manila Bay. Man at left center is standing on submerged equipment. The boat carried about 130 Filipinos on a cruise to Corregidor Island. At least 28 persons lost their lives when the vessel capsized. (AP Wirephoto)

Methodists Set War 'Mourning'

GREEN LAKE, Wis. (AP) — A state day of mourning and repentance for American "war crimes" in Southeast Asia was called for Sunday by the Wisconsin Conference of the United Methodist Church.

The Methodist group, which represents 500 Wisconsin churches, invited other denominations to share in this effort.

The end of all "direct and indirect (American) military involvement" in Southeast Asia by the end of this year, and United States recognition of Red China were also urged by the 700 delegates representing 165,000 Wisconsin Methodists.

The conference said Red China should be represented along with Nationalist China in the United Nations.

A substantial portion of the world's population lives in Red China, the delegates noted, and "Chinese participation is essential to any long run plans for preserving world peace."

The Methodists also went on record as supporting repeal of Wisconsin's fornication law.

The conference voted to support a section of its Board of Christian Social Concerns' informative report recommending that the law be taken off the books. The action came on a request that the section be deleted from the report.

In action Saturday, the delegates said the church should promote family life education, including the providing of information on over-population and contraceptives.

A donation of $1,400 to the relief fund of East Pakistan was approved for purchase of anti-choleera vaccine and operation of a mobile hospital.

All Methodist churches in the state will be asked to contribute to the fund, which has a national goal of $150,000.

Car impounded

The suspect was taken to the Outagamie County jail where he was still being held for Fond du Lac authorities this morning. Outagamie County Sheriff Calvin L. Spice said Ascher's car has been impounded pending a further investigation.

Authorities also are holding a .32 caliber revolver found under the front seat of the car.

Police apparently have not yet determined a motive for the shooting.

One of Ascher's seven children told The Post-Crescent this morning that he had just talked to his father from his hospital room.

He said his father sometimes picked up hitchhikers "if they looked like nice guys." Ascher is a laborer at International Harvester.

Tops Glittering List Sinatra Makes Final Bow at Benefit

BY BOB THOMAS
Associated Press Writer

HOLLYWOOD (AP) — He stood with feet apart, head tilted, his throat quivering as he sang into a hand-held mike.

Frank Sinatra had performed in his unique style thousands of times in the past 30 years. But this time it was different. He said it was his last performance.

Sunday night's glittering audience, including Vice President Spiro T. Agnew and Gov. Ronald Reagan understood the drama as Sinatra sang "The record shows ... I took the blows ... and did it my way."

Sinatra, 55, was the last performer at an all-star Music Center gala that raised $800,000 for the Motion Picture and Television Relief Fund. He followed such stars as Bob Hope, Mitzi Gaynor, Jack Benny, Jimmy Durante, Cary Grant, James Stewart, Princess Grace of Monaco, the Fifth Dimension and Pearl Bailey with a "Hello, Dolly!" chorus that included Rock Hudson, Sammy Davis Jr., David Niven, Jack Lemmon and Don Rickles.

Immediately before Sinatra, Barbra Streisand electrified the audience with her songs. But it was Frank Sinatra's night.

Teaching, Writing

Sinatra announced last April that he was retiring from show business to devote himself to teaching, writing and other activities.

The audience was aware of his resolve to retire after the performance. His choice of songs took on special significance: They seemed to be a review of his career and a summation of his philosophy.

He was introduced by close friend, actress Rosalind Russell. In a voice heavy with emotion she termed him: "This greatest entertainer of the 20th century."

He came on stage for the first of three standing ovations during his half hour performance.

"This was the beginning," he remarked and launched into "All Or Nothing At All," his first hit record after leaving the Tommy Dorsey band to go on his own.

Next, Nelson Riddle's thumping arrangements of "I've Got You Under My Skin" then launched into "I'll Never Smile Again" which catapulted him to fame with the Dorsey band ... "Old Man River" ... "That's Life" ... "Try a Little Tenderness" ... "Fly Me to the Moon" ... "Nancy With a Laughing Face," which he sang when daughter Nancy was a small girl.

My Way

Most of all, it was "My Way" that seemed to bear the most meaning: "... I've had my share of losing ... but may I say, not in a shy way ... the record shows I took the blows and did it my way."

The final song was "Angel Eyes" which he sang on a darkened stage with only side spotlights illuminating his face. The final line: "Excuse me while I disappear." And he did.

The ovation was thundering when the lights went up. He returned to face the standing audience and said, "Goodbye—I love you," then strolled off stage for the last time.

Air Force Plane With 24 Believed Down in Pacific

HONOLULU (AP) — Military aircraft searched the Pacific Ocean 700 miles southeast of here early today for a missing Air Force transport jet carrying 24 persons believed to be military personnel.

The four-engined C135, military version of the Boeing 707, disappeared Sunday on a 2,227-mile flight from Pago Pago, American Samoa, to Hawaii.

An area 200 miles north of Palmyra Island became the center of search operations after rescue planes picked up the signal of a crash position indicator, said Capt. Bill Ballee, an Air Force information officer.

"We can't be positive that the device is from the missing plane," Ballee said. "We'll only know for sure after we have it picked up after daylight."

He said no debris had been spotted.

Ballee said the crash position indicator is ejected from a plane when the crew knows it is going down. It sends a constant radio signal to guide searching aircraft to the site.

Ballee said the device was spotted by a search plane that followed the beacon's signal.

An Air Force-Navy air search was launched after the transport failed to reach Hickam Air Force Base near Honolulu at 3 p.m. HST. It left Pago Pago at 10:10 a.m. and carried fuel for nine hours.

Ballee said all those aboard the aircraft are believed to be Air Force personnel.

The C135 was attached to the Air Force System Command, formerly the Research and Development Command, headquartered at Andrews AFB, Washington, D.C., Ballee said.

He said he could not disclose the plane's mission.

Appeals Rejected By Supreme Court

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Supreme Court today ruled that Marlon Brando must stand trial on slander charges, and also narrowly agreed that cities may close down swimming pools and other public facilities, denying their use to both blacks and whites.

Brando has been accused by three policemen of defaming them in a description on the Joey Bishop television show in 1968 of the slaying of a young Black Panther in Oakland.

The actor's appeal contended people have a constitutional right to impersonally criticize a government agency without fear of legal action.

The court declined to hear the appeal, 8 to 1, clearing the way for Brando's trial.

The actor appeared on the since-defunct Bishop show about three weeks after Bobby Hutton, 17, was slain in what Brando described as "a shoot-out with police."

"Shot Down"

"He came out of the house with his hands up," Brando said. "He was told to come out. They surrendered and he came out with his hands full up and he was told to run for the car. And he was shot down in front of any number of witnesses."

Brando did not name any of the policemen involved. The three officers who are suing him for $6 million have said they shot at young Hutton.

The court made no comment in rejecting the appeal over the dissent of Justice Hugo L. Black.

Turning down a plea by a group of Jackson, Miss., Negroes, the court said there is no illegal discrimination when the use of public facilities. All the Constitution requires, said Justice Hugo L. Black, is that the states do not promote separation of the races.

The pools ruling marked another turning point. It was a rare defeat for civil rights forces after years of almost uninterrupted victory in the high court.

The decision was forged by an alignment with Black of the two Nixon administration appointments, Chief Justice Warren E. Burger and Justice Harry A. Blackmun, and two conservative holdovers, John M. Harlan and Potter Stewart.

WASHINGTON (AP) — The House and Senate floors this week— and appears headed for defeat in both.

Climax votes could come Wednesday afternoon.

Antiwar groups that sent hundreds of citizen lobbyists to Capitol Hill last week to line up votes for the year-end U.S. pull-out say they can win at least in the Senate.

But they came away with few hard commitments beyond votes they already had—votes leaving them short of victory in the Senate, far short in the House.

The issue in both houses: Cutting off funds for the war effective Dec. 31, unless President Nixon declares such action would jeopardize release of American prisoners or safe withdrawal of U.S. troops.

Another plan was proposed today in Boston by Senate Democratic Leader Mike Mansfield. In a speech prepared for the Boston College commencement ceremony, he called for a series of "phased and rapid U.S. withdrawals" from South Vietnam, in exchange for a phased release of Americans held prisoners of war.

Mansfield said President Nixon should seek such an arrangement "by a specific date in the near future."

But with the antiwar amendment headed for apparent defeat the White House gave no sign of changing its position. Secretary of Defense Melvin R. Laird Sunday reiterated the administration opposes setting a definite date, saying it would take a year to disengage all American troops.

Sen. Hubert H. Humphrey, D-Minn., who has denied some Democratic charges that Nixon is using the withdrawal issue for political purposes, disagreed it would take a year to get out. But both men said the Hatfield-McGovern proposal is almost certain to be defeated.

Laird appeared on CBS' "Face the Nation" program, Humphrey on the ABC program "Issues and Answers."

An effort to tie the Hatfield-McGovern version to the draft bill in the Senate is scheduled Wednesday. The House counterpart will be offered as an amendment to a $21.8 billion weapons bill Wednesday or Thursday.

President Nixon's veto is certain if an end-the-war amendment gets through Congress.

But the pre-vote surveys indicate a veto will not be called for.

An Associated Press poll found 53 senators against the Dec. 31 deadline and 36 for with four of the 11 declaring themselves undecided known to be leaning against.

House Democratic Whip Thomas P. O'Neill Jr., a chief backer of the Dec. 31 withdrawal and the man who keeps track of vote lineups on major issues, expects up to 150 House votes, far short of a 218 majority.

Common Cause, Lobby of Americans and dozens of independent groups including the United Auto Workers, women's organizations and church delegations planned to continue their lobby effort right up to the vote.

Steady Hand Required for Construction of Tower

BY CAPPY DICK
Construction of a toothpick and paper clip tower is a real challenge. A steady hand is required because round toothpicks are to be used and they have a tendency to roll.

To start the construction, place two paper clips on the table as in figure 1, then lay two toothpicks on top of them. Place two paper clips on top of the toothpicks, lining them up with the clips at the very bottom. Then add two more toothpicks, lining them up with the first pair.

Continue adding paper clips and toothpicks to build the tower as high as possible. If a friend is available, let him try his hand at building a tower to see whose will be the taller before one or the other collapses.

2 Theater-Drama Majors Given Cloak Awards at LU

The F. Theodore Cloak Scholarship, significant contributions to the theatre and drama department, the award named in honor of the man who founded the Lawrence University theatre program, was presented to two theatre-drama majors at Lawrence University.

It was presented at a ceremony Saturday.

Named winners of the award were Junior Cynthia White of Geneseo, Ill., and Senior Rick Rothchild of Thousand Oaks, in California.

Miss White and Rothchild were presented the Cloak award because they displayed the greatest personal growth and accomplishment while pursuing their studies in the theatre.

White, who has been presented the award for four years, was a member of the faculty at Lawrence University. He has remained on the theatre-drama faculty as professor emeritus for the past two years and next year will be a member of the faculty at Lawrence's Overseas Study Center in London, England.

Cloak motivated by his interest in the theatre, built upon the two courses in theatre which were being taught when he arrived on campus in 1929 and established within four years a separate theatre and drama department.

During his career at Lawrence, he directed about 900 major productions of the Lawrence Theatre, in addition to countless shorter dramatic works. Until 1969, he did everything from set design to carpentry himself. He was one of the first college theatre directors to produce a play arena style.

For 11 years, he conducted a summer school of acting in conjunction with the Berkshire Playhouse in Stockbridge, Mass., from which emerged such stars as Kathryn Hepburn and Jane Wyatt.

Families Have Ties to Lawrence

In all 33 members of the Class of '71 count a total of 100 relatives who preceded them at Lawrence.

Students whose fathers preceded them at Lawrence are Pamela Locklin, Bracebridge, Ontario, Canada; and William Schriber, son of Mr. and Mrs. Rufus Kellogg Schriber of Menasha.

Patricia M. Spoerl, Louisville, Ky., has a mother who is a graduate of Milwaukee-Downer College, and Peter Olson's mother graduated from Lawrence. Olson is the son of Mr. and Mrs. M. Olson, 1618 Orchard Drive, Appleton.

In addition to students with one or more parents or grandparents who preceded them at Lawrence, there are 14 graduates who list brothers or sisters on the Lawrence alumni rolls, 10 with cousins and nine with aunts or uncles.

Mike Hegan Sold to A's

First Baseman Was Hitting .221 For Brewers

MILWAUKEE (AP) — The Milwaukee Brewers have sold first baseman Mike Hegan, a solid glove man with a light batting average this year, to the Oakland Athletics in a straight cash deal, the club said today.

Hegan became expendable when the Brewers traded popular left fielder Danny Walton to New York this month for first baseman Frank Epedino and a minor leaguer.

The Brewers also said they have added Rob Ellis, a hard-hitting third baseman from Michigan State, to their active roster, replacing Hegan. Ellis, an all Big Ten pick, was the Brewers' first pick in the second phase of the baseball draft. He was signed Saturday.

Hegan is batting .221 this season. The Brewers did not disclose the amount of cash involved saying only that it was more than the waiver price. The club did say at least one other team was interested in Hegan.

Wahl, Floberg Win Crown

ANTIGO — Green Bay Oneida's Nic Wahl and Tom Floberg won the Northeastern Wisconsin Golf Association best ball tournament title here Sunday.

They beat Manitowish Branch River's Pete Hansen and Gene Heino on Wahl's 12-foot birdie putt on the 19th hole.

It was the third best-ball honor for Wahl. He had shared the other two titles (1956 and '58) with Jim White. Floberg had won it once before — with Roger Eberhard (1968).

Floberg and Wahl were two up after 13 holes of the finals, but Hansen and Heino won the 14th and 16th to force the overtime.

Hansen and Heino had eliminated Fox Valley's Pete Benson and Tom Hanby, 4 and 3, in the semi-final. Wahl and Floberg had stopped White and Paul Kaste, 2 and 1, in the semis.

Titles in other flights were won by Sheboygan Pine Hills' Herb Weber and Dick Suessens, Nick Martini, treasurer's. McDowell Hurls 9th 2-Hitter of Career

Indians Blast Brewers, 11-0

CLEVELAND, Ohio (AP) — Cleveland Indians Manager Alvin Dark thinks pitcher Sam McDowell eased up a little after the Tribe notched 10 runs in the first three innings Sunday to romp over the Milwaukee Brewers 11-0.

"Sam pitched hard when he had to, but after we got him those first 10 runs in the first three innings, I think he eased up a little and just tried to get the game over," Dark said.

McDowell (7-5) acknowledged "I was thinking no-hitter," but Rich Auerbach, who had a .174 batting average going into the game, lashed a double to left in the sixth for the Brewers' first hit.

McDowell, who walked four and struck out nine, loaded the bases with walks in the sixth and was nicked for a single by Dave May in the seventh, but finished his ninth two-hitter of his career and his second of the season.

Dark said McDowell is "as good right now as he was anytime last year. Sam is all the way caught up now."

Hits 10th Homer

Graig Nettles' 10th homer and Frank Baker's first were the big blows in the 10-run spurge as the Indians rapped 15 hits, including three each by Jack Heidemann and Ray Fosse.

It was the Indians' eighth victory in their last 10 games and their 20th in 30 games dating back to May 9.

"This is the loosest I felt and the best fast ball I had all year," McDowell said. "When I ran into trouble, I said, 'Here it is, hit it if you can.' I tried to lay it down the middle, but I couldn't. I guess you might call it a great game the first five innings, a lousy game the next two and a pretty good one the last two."

"When I tried to lay the ball in there and couldn't I got mad at myself, and when I got mad at myself, I've got the game won," the tall southpaw said.

The Royals broke a 3-all tie in the sixth inning and pinned Sonny Siebert with his third straight setback on Chuck Harrison's infield hit, a walk and Jerry May's run-scoring single.

Willie Horton drove in five runs with his 13th homer, a double and single to pace the Tigers past the faltering Twins.

K-C Steals Win From Boston

Everything's up to date in Kansas City except the Boston Red Sox, who are falling behind. Behind the Baltimore Orioles and Detroit Tigers, that is.

The red-hot Kansas City Royals made it six straight over the Red Sox Sunday with a 4-3 victory that dumped Boston into third place in the American League East, five games behind the Orioles and one-half game in back of the Tigers, who trimmed Minnesota 9-5.

The Royals, meanwhile, have won five in a row and 11 of their last 12 and pulled within five games of Oakland in the AL West as the A's bowed to the New York Yankees 5-1.

Nats Top California

Elsewhere, Baltimore edged the Chicago White Sox 2-1 as Mike Cuellar posted his eighth consecutive triumph, Cleveland blasted Milwaukee 11-0 behind Sam McDowell's two-hit pitching and Washington beat California 5-2.

The Royals, who started Boston's slide with a three-game sweep in Fenway Park two weeks ago, kept it going with three weekend victories, giving the Red Sox four straight defeats and 11 in their last 14 games. Sunday, however, was the first time they had to come from behind.

Whether it's jumping out in front or coming from behind, the Royals are running wild. They stole four more bases Sunday, giving them 44 in 56 attempts. Freddie Patek swiped second and third in the first inning to set up a run and Ted Savage stole third in the fifth and scored on a single by Patek.

"Gover had a church breakfast or lunch together prior to each of McDowell's last five straight victories. But Sunday caused some problems.

Aaron Cracks No. 19

Braves' Rookie Slams Pair of Homers, Leads 9-0 Shelling of Astros

By KEN RAPPOPORT Associated Press Sports Writer

Earl Williams finally is getting his chance at third base. Well, better late than early.

Williams, who couldn't crack the lineup when Clete Boyer was with the Atlanta Braves, is making the best of his opportunity now that the veteran's gone.

Atlanta's swinging rookie infielder knocked in six runs with two homers Sunday, leading the Braves to a 9-0 shelling of the Houston Astros.

"You have days like that," said Williams, who always seems to play his best as a fill-in for Boyer, the slick third baseman released recently after a squabble with management.

When Boyer was sick earlier this year, Williams played third during a three-game series with Philadelphia and had a party at the plate with three homers among his seven hits.

The high-tailing Pittsburgh Pirates ripped the slumping St. Louis Cardinals 8-4; the hot Los Angeles Dodgers clouted the Montreal Expos 7-1; the San Diego Padres nipped the Philadelphia Phillies 9-8; the Cincinnati Reds stopped the Chicago Cubs 4-3 in 11 innings and the New York Mets edged the San Francisco Giants 5-4 in 10.

Not First Time

It wasn't the first time Williams hit two homers in one game. He hit a pair in that Philadelphia series on April 17.

"The thing that stands out most in my mind is that the two homers came against big league pitching," said Williams of his two, three-run shots Sunday. "A guy like Don Wilson is a great pitcher. I never faced the other pitcher (Buddy Harris).

Does Williams feel the pressure trying to fill Clete's shoes?

"I don't try to emulate Boyer or to be his successor," he said.

In between the Williams' power display, Hank Aaron lashed homer No. 19 and the 611th of his career. Pat Jarvis fired a five-hitter for his second victory in a row after seven losses.

Richie Hebner's three-run homer capped a five-run uprising in the ninth to help Pittsburgh hammer St. Louis and maintain first place in the National League East by 2½ games over New York. The Pirates have won four in a row and 12 of 16 and St. Louis, which dropped 3½ games behind in third, has lost six straight and 10 of 13.

The Cardinals had taken a 4-3 lead with two runs in the sixth on Jim Beauchamp's double. Ted Sizemore's single, an error by second baseman Dave Cash and a single by Luis Melendez Bobby Valentine hit his first major league home run, a three-run job in the second inning, and added three more singles as Los Angeles took its 12th victory in 16 games and climbed within six games of front-running San Francisco in the West.

3-Run Uprising

Valentine singled to start another three-run uprising in the fifth and drove in a run in the eighth with his final hit.

Johnson Gets Key Hit

Foxes Win, Retain Lead of 2 Games

WATERLOO, Ia. — Lamar Johnson's 2-run single highlighted a 4-run seventh inning rally as the Appleton Foxes beat Waterloo, 6-4, Sunday afternoon for their fourth straight win.

The win enabled Appleton to maintain its 2-game edge over runnerup Cedar Rapids in the Northern Division of the Midwest League.

Appleton trailed, 2-1, going into the seventh, but knocked Waterloo starter and loser Randy Hammon from the box. Dan Rourke and Edito Arteaga singled and Adrian Kenary sacrificed to open the frame.

Mike Nichols came in and got Ross Sapp on strikes before loading the bases with a walk to Brian Downing. Rourke tied the game on Bob Servoss' passed ball, and Jerry Hariston walked to again fill the bases and set the stage for Johnson.

Slaps Second Hit

Johnson slapped his second hit of the day to left, scoring Arteaga and Downing. Sam Ewing followed with a single to score Hariston with the fourth run of the inning.

Appleton opened the scoring in the first on singles by Sapp, Hariston and Johnson. The Foxes' final run came in the eighth when Arteaga reached first on an error, Eugene Koon sacrificed and Sapp singled.

A double by Rex Goodsen and single by Jeff Stout tied the game in the bottom of the first for the Royals.

Waterloo took the lead in the fifth on a single by Tom Poquett, a balk, and infield out, and a single by Stout.

The Royals added two more in the ninth on hits by Servoss and Poquett and a 2-run single by Jim Smith.

Kenary picked up his fourth win of the season against one loss. The tall right-hander worked six innings, giving up two runs, eight hits, three walks and three strikeouts. Koon pitched the final three innings and issued two runs, three hits, and fanned two.

Appleton and Waterloo meet again tonight.

Tips 3 in Playoff

Barrage of Birdies Gives Weiskopf Dramatic Victory

BY BOB GREEN

CHARLOTTE, N.C. (AP) — "It's like shooting craps," Tom Weiskopf said of his playoff victory over Dale Douglass, Lee Trevino and South African Gary Player in the $150,000 Kemper Open Golf Tournament.

Weiskopf, who broke a three-year victory drought with his dramatic, come-from-behind triumph Sunday, was talking about the use of sudden-death to settle ties after 72 holes.

"If you've got more than one player, then sudden-death isn't really a major test. A lot of luck enters into it.

"If you're playing head to head with just one man, it may be a little more fair. I don't really like it. I'd only played in two before, and lost in both of those."

"It's a joke," said Player, one of the world's foremost players, who now has a poor, 3-10 record in playoffs. Trevino and Douglass fled the Quail Hollow Country Club course without comment.

Starts Drive

All four had finished the regulation 72 holes at 277, 11 under par. Weiskopf was six strokes off the pace, being set by Douglass, when he started the drive that brought him the victory.

He reeled off birdies on the final four holes, sinking putts of 10, 10, 8 and 18 feet.

Weiskopf, Trevino and Player — who had a fantastic four-putts on one green — all had final rounds 69s on the 7,778-yard, par 72 layout and Douglass had a 70.

They went to the 569-yard, par-five 15th hole to begin the playoff. All were on in three, with Weiskopf about eight feet away. The other three missed birdie attempts in the 12-20 foot range before Weiskopf lined it up, stepped away once, then stroked it home for his fifth birdie in a row.

The $30,000 first prize pushed his earnings for the year to $60,367.

"I was so nervous, I was shaking so bad I just had to step away from the putt," said tall Tom, who was hailed as a potential super star after winning twice in 1968. He hadn't won since.

Starts Pressing

"After I won those two," the handsome, 28-year-old said, "I thought I could win 'em all, win every time I went out. I started pressing, pressing to shoot a 68 or 69 every round. And I went into a slump.

"Then last year, I'd done pretty well. I didn't win a tournament, but I had the low stroke average on the tour and won almost $100,000, so I didn't play after Labor Day.

"I just took four months off and went hunting.

"I think my game suffered a little because of it, but I've been working on it very hard. The hardest I ever have.

"I think my game is coming back. I think I am coming back."

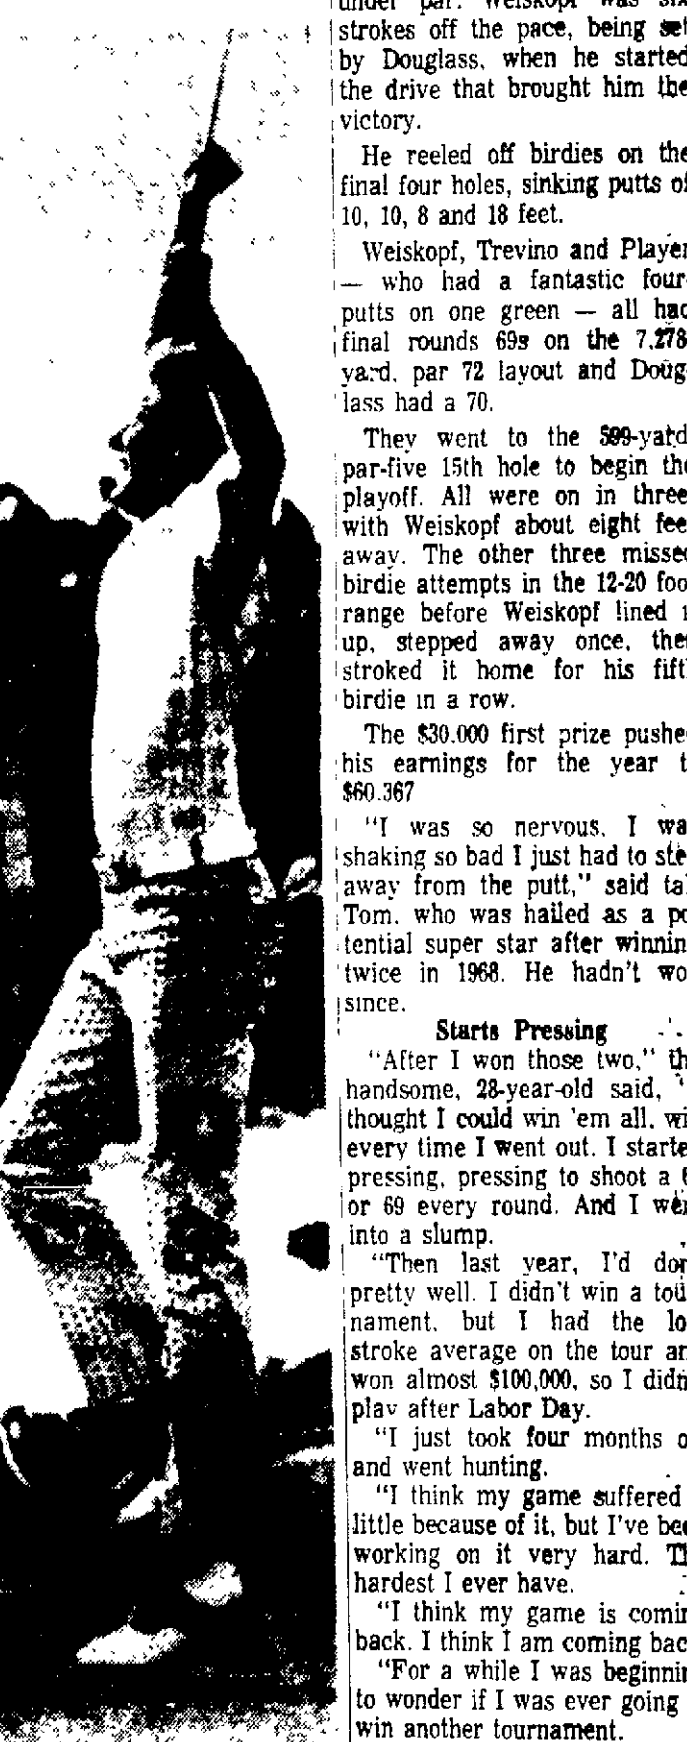

"For a while I was beginning to wonder if I was ever going to win another tournament.

"But I don't think I have reached my potential. And I don't think I have worked as hard on my game as I can."

Trevino, Player and Douglass each picked up $11,600.

Two strokes back of them were Bob Lunn, the second and third-round leader who slipped to a final 73, George Johnson and Rod Funseth, tied at 279.

Arnold Palmer never really got it going, had a final 72 and finished in a tie for 12th at 281.

Threw Slider
Jenkins, who had two strikes on May, said "I was trying to waste the pitch but I threw a slider that came up high." Anderson also wasn't surprised the Cubs decided to pitch to May. "I think the guy they wanted to pitch around was (Tony) Perez, but I really don't know what they wanted to do."

The play which didn't surprise Anderson came in the ninth inning when Brock Davis beat out a drag bunt and was sacrificed to second. With Jenkins at bat, Davis attempted to steal third but was thrown out by catcher Bill Plummer.

Military Duty
"We kept watching Davis from the bench and he kept edging up," said Anderson "and we were almost sure he was going to try to steal. He'd have had it stolen if the throw wasn't perfect. Plummer can throw just as hard as (Johnny) Bench."

Bench was not available for the game because of weekend military duty.

The key to the game was Cincinnati pitching following the first inning when Gary Nolan yielded three runs on a walk, a run-scoring single by Billy Williams and Joe Pepitone's two-run homer. It was Pepitone's eighth of the season, the 200th of his career and extended his hitting streak to 12 games.

From then on the Cubs were blanked by Nolan who pitched through the seventh and relieved Joe Gibbon and Wayne Granger.

The team of Ival and Myrl Van Handel leads with a 4-2 mark.

Miss Whitworth Wins

Kathy Ahern Places 2nd in LPGA Meet

SUTTON, Mass. (AP) — Kathy Whitworth, once again the Ladies PGA champion, trained her sights today on one of the few titles which have eluded her in an illustrious career—the U.S. Open.

"I just wish the Open could be played here on this course," Miss Whitworth said with a smile Sunday after winning the LPGA championship at Pleasant Valley Country Club.

The 31-year-old Texan was only half joking. She won the LPGA title at Pleasant Valley in 1967, was beaten in a playoff the next year, and returned to the course to win the Patty Berg Classic in 1969.

After losing another shot at the LPGA title in a playoff with Shirley Englehorn here last year, Miss Whitworth bounced back to win the crown Sunday at a 72-hole playoff with a 72-hole score of four-under-par 288.

More Than $326,000
Miss Whitworth took bogeys on the 14th, 15th and 16th greens in the final round as Sandra Haynie cut the tall veteran's lead to two strokes. However, Kathy sank a 15-foot putt for a birdie three on the tough 17th and went on to win easily.

Miss Ahern, 22, a former Western Junior Champion, finished with a 75 for a par-equaling 292. She collected $5,800 for her best showing since she turned pro five years ago.

Sandra Post Elliott, who defeated Miss Whitworth in an LPGA playoff in 1968, former New England champion Jane Foy, and Miss Haynie tied for third at 293, earning $3,278 each. Don Carter Bowls 300 Game in First Meet in 15 Months

FRESNO, Calif. (AP)—Home-town pro Ed Bourdase withstood a challenge by Don Carter and held onto the lead after the first-round of match play in the $7,500 Fresno Open Bowling Tournament Sunday night.

Bourdase, 39, threw 11 straight strikes in his final match and settled for a 297 game to take a 114-pin lead over Jack Major of Vancouver. The three-day tournament concludes today with 16 games of match play.

Carter, the Tarzana, Calif., veteran making a comeback after being out 15 months with assorted injuries, vaulted into the lead in the sixth game with a perfect 300, but fell to third in the next game with a 167.

In his first Professional Bowlers Association tournament finals in 2½ years, Carter trailed Major by 18 pins.

Bourdase had a pair of 258 games and averaged 230 for the night. He had led 24 qualifiers into the finals Sunday afternoon.

Tour rookie Jim Contrestano, another hometown bowler, shot his and the tournament's first perfect game Sunday, but failed to make the finals.

'Baltimore Chop' Returns

BALTIMORE (AP) — The chop and run like Belanger, Cuellar, stole third and scored "Baltimore chop," supposedly, Frey said, "he'd have a great as Don Buford bounced into a force play."

Belanger's speed also led to The White Sox, who completed Belanger's first run off loser four double plays, missed a possible twin killing when Mel Calufetti in the eighth inning. Ceci was reported in satisfactory condition today in St. Joseph Hospital here.

Mark Belanger's high bounce off home plate lingered in the air long enough to permit Brooks Robinson to score the winning run in the seventh inning of Sunday's 2-1 victory over the Chicago White Sox.

Belanger, who scoots to first in 4.1 seconds, easily beat the throw from third baseman Bill Melton—who could do nothing until the ball completed its downward flight.

According to baseball lore, Baltimore's National League champions of 1894-95-96 bounced a lot of hits off special clay which hardened the ground in front of home plate.

Chief Exponent
Wee Willie Keller, a speedster who batted between .371 and .424 during five consecutive seasons, was said to be one of the chief exponents of the play.

After winning for the 12th time in their last 14 decisions, with Mike Cuellar upping his record to 10-1, the Orioles expressed some doubts about the time-honored chop.

"Maybe the spitter and emery ball in those days made it dip and cause the ball to be hit down," said Baltimore batting coach Jim Frey, "but I can't believe anyone was good enough to develop the play."

A Great Thing
Belanger, who said he heard about the chop while growing up in Massachusetts, revealed his disbelief of the play's credibility when asked to describe how he hit the ball.

"I try to make contact with the bottom one-quarter inch of the bat on the seam of the ball," he deadpanned, "and make the ball hit the edge of the plate."

Bobby Allison Wins Motor State 400

CAMBRIDGE JUNCTION, green weather, which probably Mass., was third in a Plymouth and Fred Lorenzen were fifth, Mich. (AP) — He had just driven meant 100-degree-plus temperatures inside his 1969 Mercury. Donnie Allison, also of Hueytown, Ala., was sixth and seventh respectively in 400 miles in two hours, 41 minutes and 13 seconds.

He had just survived serious challenges from his younger brother and two other top drivers, the thought of running out of gas one lap early, and nipping-tuck finish.

came home with the winning run as the Orioles nipped the White Sox for their 10th victory in 11 games.

Cuellar worked out of three jams in boosting his record to 10-1. Tom Eagan's seventh-inning homer was the only Chicago run.

Roy White drove in three runs with a sacrifice fly and a double in support of Fritz Peterson's seven-hit pitching as the Yankees defeated the A's. The A's had runners on base in every inning but Peterson faltered only in the fifth when Bert Campaneris singled and Joe Rudi doubled him home.

Toby Harrah hit his first major league homer, a two-run blast off Jim Maloney, and reliever Casey Cox pitched out of several jams to lead the Senators over the Angels.

Cox came in with runners at first and third and one out in the fifth and escaped without a run. The Angels loaded the bases in the sixth but Ken Berry popped and pinch hitter Alex Johnson lined back to Cox, who started an inning-ending double play.

Pain Now Almost Gone

Bart Starr Has Vivid Memory of Play That Brought on Arm Injury

GREEN BAY — Bart Starr's memory of the moment is a vivid one. He has had dreams about it. He has had nightmares about it.

It was the third game of the 1967 season. The Packers were playing Atlanta in Milwaukee County Stadium.

"I dropped back and Tommy Nobis was blitzing. Somehow, he overran me. But there was a little delay in the timing of the pass and just as I had my arm cocked to throw, he hit me from behind. The blow was right, below my right shoulder. I had to leave the game because I couldn't even pick up the ball."

From that dark moment on, Bart Starr has never been quite the same. Not even in 1968 when his pass completion percentage hit a sizzling 63.7 per cent, best ever in his pro tenure.

Missed 4 Games
Starr missed four games in that 1967 season, though he spurred the Packers to the NFL championship in the famed Ice Bowl and then to the Super Bowl title.

But there was soreness. And there was pain. And there was a furor about whether he would or should play again.

Both the pain and the furor continued through the 1970 season. And as the 1971 season approaches, the furor still goes on... but the pain seems to be subsiding.

It must be. Taking a few minutes out from studying films in preparation for the new season one day last week, Starr confessed, "It was just plain embarrassing for me to play last year. Carroll Dale was so open so many times and I just couldn't get the ball to him. I have too much pride to go through that again."

Because of Money
And in answer to a point blank question about whether he might be hanging on because of the money he can make, Starr declared, "There's not enough money anywhere to pay for what I went through last year."

There were times last season when Starr had trouble lifting a fork. Though he continued to treat the pain as one of Vince Lombardi's "little hurts." It was definitely a big hurt. The pain stabbed through his shoulder, upper arm and upper back with every move. For six weeks, he couldn't sleep night or day. He lived on aspirin.

Why, then, is he planning to play again? Indeed why did he ever decide to play again after the 1967 season?

Sense of Loyalty
Bart admits the temptation to retire after that "three straight" accomplishment was tremendous. He received hundreds of letters suggesting he do just that, including one in particular from a close friend whose common sense holds the utmost respect of the Stars.

But when Lombardi turned over the reins to Phil Bengtson, Starr felt a strong sense of loyalty combined with duty to an organization he professes to feel privileged to have been a part of all his pro career.

Besides, the shoulder felt good during the off season. Just as it did after the 1968 season and the 1969 season.

"Each year, I felt I was physically capable of playing a full year. If I hadn't felt that way, I would have walked away. But I didn't feel I was degenerating or slipping physically. And then there's a something I guess you could call foolish pride. I didn't like finishing a year standing around watching our team lose when I felt I could still be helping."

Love for Game
But, in addition to his concern for the welfare of the team, he says the underlying reason is that "my love for the game has not diminished. I think this is the real test of a person's ability to continue playing. If he has a deep, flaming desire to play, he should as long as he can contribute. When you lose that desire, your exit should be quick."

It was this desire and the new hope produced by a re-evaluation of his injured arm that spurred him to try again in 1971. A combination of sources is responsible for the re-evaluation progress, the team doctors and trainers, several consultants and some personal at the Mayo Clinic.

said the Los Angeles youngster. "It's a day to smile. It also means winning and gaining some ground. I hope it means, too, that I'll be able to play more."

Pinch-hitter Bob Barton drove in two runs with an eight-inning double to pull San Diego from behind. Barton's double off reliever Woody Fryman decided a slugger's battle with Philadelphia.

Lee May singled home the winning run in the 11th, sparking Cincinnati's success. May's game-winning hit off Ferguson Jenkins scored Pete Rose from second and handed the Cub ace his sixth loss in 16 decisions.

The Reds had tied it 3-3 with an unearned run in the eighth.

Shows Are Forecast Tonight over much of the eastern half of the nation and also in part of the West. There will be cool weather in the Great Lakes area and in the Great Plains States. Warm temperatures are expected in the South. (AP Wirephoto Map)

Black Film Maker's Dream Comes True

'Bus Is Coming' Finally Made, Premiere
To Benefit Danny Thomas' Hospital Charity

HOLLYWOOD (AP) — On July 2 a new film called "The Bus Is Coming" will be premiered at the Hollywood Pallas. Disillusioned by his entry into the film business, Jackson resolved to continue his education. He attended Los Angeles City College for three years, then worked as a story of how it was made, it could be a winner.

"The Bus Is Coming" is the brainchild of Horace Jackson, 38, a black film maker who refused to give up his project. Even when he and his wife and daughter were evicted from their home for failure to make an $85 payment.

Lived on Music

Jackson is the youngest son of 21 children born to a Philadelphia coal yard worker. The elder Jackson and his wife had hopes for their children and sent each of them to college.

"It was a tough life, but we lived off music," Horace began. "Music was what kept me alive."

"When I heard Judy Garland singing 'Over the Rainbow,' that really got to me. I knew there had to be someplace over the rainbow for me. I said to myself, 'There's got to be a better place for me to live than Philadelphia.'"

Young Jackson was drawn to California, and he arrived in Los Angeles with $17 and his suitcase. Most of all, he wanted to see movie stars—just to see them—and he walked halfway across town to stand at the gate to Goldwyn studios. No star appeared.

He began working for a Baptist church—"I know it sounds fluky, but I've always been tuned in to God, man." Somehow he managed to scrape together enough money and talent to make a movie, "Living Between Two Worlds." The story of a black man torn between jazz and the pulpit, it cost

He showed his script to Eddie Milks, a Paramount executive who liked it and started making telephone calls. Jackson began getting offers of help from film labs, equipment firms, sound companies.

"These were hard-headed businessmen; they're not intimate with the color of a man's skin," said Jackson. "They're like my script—and it's no 'strange thing about Hollywood' when one door opens, others start to open, too."

He hit stardom as the simple child heroine of Walt Disney's "Polyanna" and went on to make a string of Disney hits.

The romance with Boulting started in 1966 when he directed her in "The Family Way."

Hayley is Boulting's fourth wife. They announced after his divorce three years ago that they would marry but decided to wait.

Boulting explained: "There is a considerable disparity between my age and Hayley's and I thought it would have been most unfair to act hastily."

Hayley said: "People are always trying to analyze our relationship ... talking about a father figure and all that. They don't seem to believe in love any more."

Unknowns in Original, but Stars in Rerun

BY TV SCOUT
9-10 Channels 2-7 — Back in 1968, when "Higher and Higher, Attorneys at Law" was first presented, the names Sally Kellerman, John McMartin and Dustin Hoffman didn't mean all that much. But now, as Suspense Playhouse reruns the pilot for Sally and John, they have an Academy Award nominee (Sally), a superstar (Dustin) and a man starring in the Broadway hit, "Follies" (John.) (R)

6:30-7:30 Channels 2-7 — Gun-smoke. Morgan Woodward does a lot of pondering as an aging mountain man on one of his last hunts. He joins Dillon in the search for a killer wolf, not so much to get the beast as to make sure no one else does. (R)

7-8 Channel 5 — Jai Kanter, who created and produced Julia, and who is doing the Jimmy Stewart series for next season, wrote "And Baby Makes Five," a sometimes comedy on Comedy Theater, Cliff Robertson and Angie Dickinson, who weren't the names when this was made that they are today, star as a city pair who head for the country. (R)

7:30-8 Channels 2-7 — Here's Lucy has a funny premise, with Lucille Ball and Gale Gordon working at cross purposes. Lucy tries to get fired (again) so she can take a vacation in Palm Springs. At the same time, Gordon's psychiatrist tells him to be nice to her, for his psyche's sake. (R)

7:30-8 Channels 11-9 — It Was a Very Good Year peeks at 1966, when the Andrea Doria sank and the careers of Bill Russell and Jonathan Winters rose.

8-8:30 Channels 2-7 — A long-haired hippie comes to visit Uncle Howard on Mayberry R.F.D. and is there anyone here who can't figure out the kid is really not bad and all he needs is the wholesome influence of the Mayberrives to turn him into an equally wholesome citizen. (R)

8-10 Channels 2-7 — The Doris Day Show has a story as old as Cinderella, but it's fun because it gives Kay Ballard a chance to shine as a loud-mouthed love-lorn wife. (R)

To Your Good Health Too Much Water Isn't Good for Body Tissues

BY G. C. THOSTESON, M.D.
Dear Dr. Thosteson: Please explain what "water log" is and what causes it. Thank you. — J.S.

I like questions that aren't too windbaggy, but you've gone to the opposite extreme, so I'm going to have to guess what you mean. I would suspect that your doctor has told you that your body tissues have become "waterlogged" and you've got to get rid of some excess fluid. The human body, you know, is about 80 per cent water. Blood is mostly water, plus the valuable materials that it carries. The billions of cells which make up the "solid" part of the body contain large proportions of moisture.

That's the way living things are — vegetable or animal. Take an apple. Squeeze all the juice out — squeeze it absolutely dry, and see how little is left. That's where the expression "dust to dust" comes from. After death, a body gradually dries until very little is left of it.

Water serves many purposes in the body. As it flows (or sometimes only seeps) through the tissues, it picks up waste particles and carries them to the kidneys to get rid of them. If carries nourishment from the digestive tract to all the rest of the body. Chemical processes, generally speaking, do not proceed when they are dry; they need water. A person can't live long without water: a matter of a few days at most, and usually less.

But at the same time, too much water also is harmful. Haven't you ever had a flower or other house plant? Let it get too dry and it withers. But keep it too constantly wet (not moist but wet) and it can't survive, either. Call it "waterlogged."

So I presume your doctor has said you have too much water in your system. Maybe he also used the term "edema," which is swelling from accumulating more water than you need. Ankles or legs can swell, or the abdomen, or there can be too much fluid in and around the lungs, or other parts of the body.

Maybe it's because kidneys aren't working efficiently; or the heart is not providing brisk enough circulation; or there's a liver disturbance. There are different causes of edema, or "fluid retention," or "waterlogging." Salt tends to hold water; therefore low-salt diets help. (Ever notice how soggy salt gets in moist weather?) Certain drugs, known as diuretics, help the body get rid of excess water. And, naturally, if disease of the heart, kidneys, liver, or other organs is at fault, treating those organs is a more basic way of getting at the trouble. I hope I've answered what you had in mind.

Dear Dr. Thosteson: My husband had a vasectomy in 1963 before we were married. Is there any chance of my getting pregnant now? — Mrs. T.W.O.

Not if the vasectomy (cutting of the sperm duct) was successful. If you want to make sure, have your husband get a test to see whether any sperm are present. If no sperm are present, he cannot make you pregnant.

Cryosurgery — destroying tissue with extreme cold instead of cutting it away with a scalpel — is merely a different method of surgery. It is used for a good many things besides prostate surgery.

The method of surgery does not change the problem or the goal of treatment. If your surgeon uses that technique and considers it advisable in your case, he will use it. If not, he won't.

To learn the major categories of prostate trouble — symptoms, treatment, how to speed recovery — write to Dr. Thosteson in care of The Post-Crescent for his booklet, "The Prostate," enclosing 25 cents in coin and a long, self-addressed (use zip code), stamped envelope to cover cost of printing and handling.

Baby Thrown Out Window Caught By Godfather

NEW YORK (AP) — A 6-month-old boy who police said was thrown out of a second-floor window by his angry father was caught in midair by his godfather.

The boy, Jeffrey Delgado, apparently escaped injury but was taken to a hospital for observation.

Police said Sam Macchio, 58, was returning to his Bronx apartment when he heard screams, looked up and saw his godson hurtling toward the ground.

Fred Delgado, 39, had angrily warned his wife Joan, 34, that he intended to throw Jeffrey and two other children out the window, officers said. When she went to find a policeman, he hurled the boy out, they added. The other children were unharmd.

Four patrolmen broke into the barricaded apartment and arrested Delgado on charges of attempted murder, assault, endangering the welfare of a minor and resisting arrest.

3 Ride in Trunk But 22 Up Front

NYACK, N.Y. (AP) — What piqued patrolman Philip Human's interest was the three children riding in the trunk of the sedan.

But his interest turned to incredulity when he stopped the car Sunday and counted its occupants. They numbered 25, he said.

Police said driver Salvador Caban, 47, of Brooklyn, and his passengers were returning from an outing at Bear Mountain State Park. Eight persons were in the front seat, 14 in the rear and the three in the trunk.

Caban, who police noted has only one arm, was given a summons on a charge of operating a vehicle with more than three adults in the front seat.

Proof of ABC Program Is in Graduates

By WILLIAM J. WAUGH
AP Education Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — What happens when a high school student is taken from a lower income situation and placed in an exclusive private boarding school?

Sponsors of a 6-year-old modest, little-publicized experiment called A Better Chance—ABC—give this answer

—Five of every six students in the program graduate —Ninety seven per cent of ABC graduates go on to colleges, including Yale, Harvard, Dartmouth, Columbia, Cornell, Chicago and the University of Pennsylvania.

Graduate School

—At least 70 per cent finish college, and sizeable numbers enroll in graduate schools

Originally organized by 23 Northeast private schools, the program is nonprofit and 76 per cent financed by the 100 participating schools that include Phillips Exeter Academy, Miss Hall's School, Deerfield Academy, The Choate School, Brooks School and St. Paul's School

National in scope, the ABC program is aimed at ninth and 10th grade students in situations that seem to "rule out academic success."

Although 76 per cent of the participating students are black, the program also includes whites and such minority groups as American Indians, Puerto Ricans, Mexican-Americans and others. The students come from rural as well as urban areas

Welfare Recipients

In 1970, 44 per cent of the incoming class were from families receiving welfare and 52 per cent from broken homes.

ABC President William D. Berkely says the schools also benefit from the experiment.

"Two leadership groups are being educated together," Berkeley said. "One from a so-

Students Get 'A Better Chance' In Schools in Fox River Valley

The ABC program which was begun in Appleton three years ago, can claim success.

Of the 15 students who graduated from the three high schools, all but two went on to colleges and universities, most under scholarship and assistance programs.

Those two had been accepted at schools but one left to get married and the other could not afford to attend. He entered the Navy and is attending school under an armed forces program.

This year's class of five graduates includes one student who has not yet been placed. The others have been accepted at Regis University, the University of Chicago, Cornell and Sycamore University.

Throughout Nation

Among the universities and colleges which have accepted the first 15 graduates are Lawrence, the University of Arizona, Penn State College, Dartmouth, Swarthmore, Northwestern, St. Mary (Winona), Stanford, Memphis, Case Western Reserve, Oshkosh, too, has taken more than a passing interest in the program and hopes to have the program in operation in the fall.

The Appleton ABC board is in the process of raising $34,000 this coming year needed to keep the program going next year. During the first two years, Dartmouth College, where the program was born, supplied the seed money and the city was asked to raise $10,000. Dartmouth supplied $10,000 last year but the amount for the coming year must come from local donations.

The directors are beginning this fall. The students are living in dormitories and have house parents. Mr. and Mrs. Jerry Howard had charge of the girls and Mr. and Mrs. Hugo Martines, the boys. Both couples have agreed to stay on next year.

same concept as ABC in removing the student from surroundings of poverty and places him in what Berkeley called "a good public school."

Each participating district establishes dorms for eight to 12 students who attend its public schools, Berkeley said. Public programs are operating in New Hampshire, Vermont, Massachusetts, Minnesota, Connecticut, California and Wisconsin.

Jettrey Palmer of Steubenville, Ohio, was in the first ABC class, graduated from Yale in 1970 and currently is at the University of Chicago Graduate School of Business. Looking back on his own experience, Palmer said.

I felt that the summer program was very rewarding, in that I learned more about my own capabilities during that one summer than all my teachers in school up to then had ever tried to show me. I am not certain what my overall attitude about private schools is. I have many bad things to say about that sort of specimen situation but at the same time there are many good things about it."

Appleton YMCA Offers Summer Art Classes To Young Students

Two art classes for grade schoolers and junior high pupils will be offered by the Appleton YMCA.

The two six-lesson courses will be Tuesdays and Thursdays. The first will begin this week, the second July 13. Grade schoolers will meet from 9 to 10 a.m. and junior high pupils from 10 to 11 a.m.

The cost is $4 for members and 18 for non-members. Offered will be instruction in drawing, painting, pen and ink sketching, block printing and mobiles and sculpturing.

In the summer program, nominees are given intensive work in English, math and reading and trained to improve study habits and use of the library.

Berkeley said.

"We try to prepare them psychologically for a new experience," he said.

The program is unlike most other programs aimed at the disadvantaged, Berkeley said, because "It seeks to alter the entire life pattern of its students."

Berkeley believes the program is more effective than the remedial training given students admitted to college without the qualifications demanded of other applicants.

"It is difficult to compensate an ill-prepared student for his poor high school education," he said. "ABC students are fully qualified academically and socially to attend and compete equally at the best colleges and universities."

In 1966, a separate ABC program for public schools was formed and today has spread to 20 school districts throughout the nation, Berkeley said.

The ABC Public School program involves 200 to 300 students and operates under the

Jobs for Veterans Get Top Federal Priority

WASHINGTON (AP) — Voicing great concern for the growing number of Vietnam veterans returning home to the unemployment rolls, President Nixon has ordered an intensive, six-point federal effort to get jobs for ex-service men.

"This is an effort which I consider to be of the highest priority in federal manpower and training programs," the President said Sunday, "and of such importance that every available program should be used to the maximum . . ."

In a letter to James D. Hodgson naming the secretary of labor to direct the job-finding effort Nixon wrote:

Burden of Fighting
"I am greatly concerned at any denial of civilian job opportunities to these young men who have borne the burden of fighting."

"I am also deeply concerned at the evidence that the most serious problem is experienced by those with educational deficiencies or other disabilities."

Hodgson told newsmen 370,000 Vietnam-era veterans don't have jobs, an unemployment rate of 10.8 per cent for those between 20 and 29 years of age. He said the jobless rate for that age group among nonveterans is 8.4 per cent.

The six points Nixon outlined for Hodgson:

—See that all contractors and agencies under federal contract list all job openings with the U.S. Employment Service.

—Broaden the employment training and counseling program operated by the Defense Department for servicemen in the last weeks of their duty.

Special Consideration
—Veterans who haven't found jobs for three months or more should be given special consideration by the Labor Department.

—See that "each returning veteran (is) reached and served by this effort" to make training and employment services more available.

—Increase cooperation with the National Alliance of Businessmen to open up industry even more to job-hunting servicemen.

—Work to increase the number of veterans in special on-the-job training and manpower programs.

—See that "each returning veteran (is) reached and served ment agencies to draw fully upon resources at hand."

Examine Problem
Nixon also told Hodgson to work closely with James Oates, chairman of the Jobs for Veterans Committee which has been examining the problem in recent months.

The Labor Secretary indicated he would take full advantage of Nixon's call "upon all govern-

In fact, said Hodgson, if current resources are short "We'll ask for more money . . . no matter what it costs."

The extra money will be well spent, Hodgson said, in fact "it's a costs savings" since each new job found means less money spent in unemployment compensation.

White House Meeting

Drug Abuse Under Discussion

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Nixon called key administration officials to the White House today along with seven U.S. ambassadors as part of a lengthy examination of drug abuse in American society.

Called to the meeting were the envoys to Mexico, Turkey, South Vietnam, Thailand, France, Luxembourg and the United Nations, plus Secretary of State William P. Rogers, Atty. Gen. John N. Mitchell and

Treasury Secretary John B. Connally. Ellsworth Bunker. U.S. ambassador to South Vietnam, told reporters at Andrews Air Force Base Sunday night the Saigon government is aware of reports that marijuana and hard drugs are increasingly available in South Vietnam, and is working on the problem.

Besides South Vietnam, the United States has urged the other countries to step up efforts to cope with the drug problem and the illicit traffic in narcotics and marijuana.

White House press secretary Ronald L. Ziegler said today's meeting will be followed later this week by announcement of a government initiative to deal with the reported widespread use of drugs by Americans in Vietnam and the growth of a youth drug culture in the United States.

Last month, a congressional report said so many American soldiers in Vietnam are being hooked on heroin that President Nixon should withdraw all U.S. troops unless the drug traffic is halted.

The report, prepared for the House Foreign Affairs Committee, said many high-ranking Laotian, Thai and Vietnamese officials have a major hand in illegal drug sales to GIs. In some cases, it said, U.S. planes and diplomatic pouches are used to ferry opium and heroin into Saigon.

Recently, the President has sent counselors Robert H. Finch and Donald Runsted to Europe and Africa to discuss drug abuse prevention and control, including drug usage relating to U.S. military personnel in foreign countries.

Both Finch and Runsted were summoned to the session today, along with Ambassadors Leonard Unger, Thailand; Robert McBride, Mexico; Arthur K. Watson, France; William J. Handley, Turkey, and George Bush, the United Nations.

Hitchhiker Accused

Driver Shot Five Times

FOND DU LAC — An attempted murder charge is expected to be filed today against a 23-year-old Green Bay hitchhiker who authorities allege pumped five bullets into a Pewaukee father of seven who gave him a ride Sunday night.

Fond du Lac County sheriff's authorities identified the shooting victim as Louis E. Ascher, 38, who, although he was struck in the head with three slugs, is in "very good condition" today at Waukesha Memorial Hospital.

The suspect in the shooting was taken into custody by two Wisconsin state patrolmen about 10 p.m. Sunday at State 47 and Evergreen Drive, a half mile north of Appleton. The shooting is believed to have occurred about 9 p.m.

Fond du Lac and Outagamie County authorities gave this account of the incident.

Ascher was alone in his station wagon, returning from a fishing trip to Green Bay, when he picked up the hitchhiker at U.S. 41 and U.S. 10, about two miles west of Appleton. That was early Sunday evening.

Ascher drove the man to Fond du Lac County Trunk P, a half mile east of County Trunk C, two miles west of U.S. 41, in the Town of Eldorado. At that point, the hitchhiker reportedly talked about paying Ascher for the ride, but instead whipped out a revolver and emptied it at the Pewaukee man.

Three of the slugs, from what is believed to be the hitchhiker's .32 caliber revolver, struck Ascher in the head. Another slug hit him in the elbow and a fifth in the hand. The sixth shot apparently missed.

The shooting suspect then took Ascher's car, leaving him in a ditch. Ascher, according to Fond du Lac County authorities, walked a quarter of a mile to a farmhouse and summoned help. He was taken to St. Agnes Hospital in Fond du Lac, where two bullets were removed from his head. He then was transferred to the Waukesha Hospital early today where a specialist was to remove the third slug.

A state policeman, who had been alerted recognized the car and license number while patrolling near U. S. 41 and State 125, just west of Appleton. He radioed for assistance from another state patrolman and together they stopped the auto shortly after it turned off U. S. 41 near State 47. The suspect offered no resistance. Seven Slain In Suspected Drug Center

DETROIT (AP) — Seven persons were shot to death and an eighth was wounded critically today in what homicide officers called execution-type slayings in a suspected dope pad.

Four women who were slain were found with their arms tied behind them. All eight of the victims were found in the first-floor living room of the two-story dwelling.

District Inspector James Barron, who headed the police team at the slaying site, said a quantity of suspected narcotics—believed to be heroin—was found in the house along with a dozen handguns and long guns, none of which appeared to have been fired recently.

7 slain unruly insert 11 A1
None of the dead was identified immediately. Police identified the wounded man as Robert Gardner, 28, who was taken to Henry Ford Hospital with two gunshot wounds in the chest. His condition was listed as critical.

Off-duty homicide detectives were called in to aid in the investigation of the multiple slayings which occurred on Hazelwood Street, just off predominantly black 12th Street—the focal point of the 1967 Detroit riots.

Homicide officers expressed belief the mass killings were the latest in a string of about 25 narcotics-connected homicides since the first of the year.

They had said previously a power struggle is under way in the Detroit narcotics underworld.

Fund Shortage Violates People's 'New' Civil Rights

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — Sen. Hubert H. Humphrey said today that lack of money in city government is causing the biggest violation of civil rights in the nation. He outlined eight programs aimed at solving the problem, including a new bank for low-cost loans.

Humphrey's remarks were prepared for delivery to more than 400 mayors gathered for the 38th annual meeting of the U.S. Conference of Mayors.

Sen. Edmund S. Muskie, D-Maine, and Housing and Urban Development Secretary George Romney also were to address the conference today.

"We must guarantee every American, no matter where he lives, certain basic minimal services and standards," Humphrey said. "Clear air, well-

"New" Rights
Before his speech, the Minnesota Democrat told newsmen these services are "the new civil rights."

"The biggest violation of civil rights in the nation today is the breakdown in city services," he said. "When city services break down they always do it first in areas where the poor live. When these services are cut back, who is hurt? The poor in the inner city."

He characterized as his new "long-term solution" the creation of a national domestic development bank "to give cities, towns, counties and states an alternative and supplemental source of capital funds."

The bank, which he has proposed in a Senate bill, would eventually provide $150 billion in long term, low-interest loans. Its operations would be financed by bonds sold to the federal government and private investors. Dividend income from the bonds would be partially exempt from federal income tax to encourage investors.

World Bank
The bank would be similar to the World Bank, Humphrey said. "If we can help build a better Rio de Janeiro, we can help build a better Philadelphia or Detroit or New York."

He also called for speedy enactment of legislation to return federal revenues to state and local governments with no restrictions on how it is spent.

President Nixon: Muskie; Rep. Wilbur Mills, D-Ark., and

Humphrey with Rep. Henry Reuss, D-Wis., all have advance plans for this kind of general federal revenue sharing.

Humphrey emphasized that he did not care which plan was approved by Congress.

"We cannot worry about authorship or partisanship," he said. "The cities are in desperate shape."

Highway Trust
Humphrey also proposed that revenue from the federal highway trust fund used to finance interstate highways be opened to the cities. "To pave city streets and build new streets, to create parking areas and to help finance maintenance costs," as well as for urban mass transit.

His five other proposals were: —A federal assumption of welfare costs now borne by state and local governments.

—Full funding of existing federal domestic aid programs and prompt release of domestic funds appropriated but as yet unsent by the Nixon administration.

—Consolidation of several current categorical—or single purpose—federal aid programs into block grants to give local governments more discretion over use of the money. However, he said some categorical grants should be maintained. "So we don't lose the sense of national direction and priorities."

—Restoration of a healthy economy through a reduction in unemployment and inflation.

13 Wounded by Gunfire During Day, Night of Disturbance in Albuquerque

ALBUQUERQUE, N.M. (AP) — Two battalions of the New Mexico National Guard were mobilized today to back Albuquerque police against any recurrence of a wild night of disorder that left at least 13 persons with gunshot wounds.

The trouble flared Sunday afternoon after police apparently tried to make an arrest at a crowded park. Before it was over, downtown businesses were burned or looted and police headquarters was stoned by an estimated crowd of 500 young people. About 150 persons were arrested.

In addition to the persons wounded by gunshot, police estimated "dozens" of others were injured from flying bottles and stones, beatings, and smoke or tear gas inhalation.

In Training
National Guard Gen. Ed Hoover arrived in Albuquerque this morning from Ft. Bliss, Tex., where the New Mexico Guard had been in summer training. About 1,000 troops were expected in the city.

Police Capt. James LaRue said, "There is no way we can handle another buildup like we park." He said he believed the later disorder was organized deliberately. "If they group up like that again, I think the only way we can take the park is with the Guard."

An estimated 500 young people had clashed with heavily armed police Sunday and during the night in disorders starting at Roosevelt Park, about two miles from downtown; then at the police headquarters downtown, and later in areas ranging from downtown to the park.

Marijuana Arrest
LaRue said the trouble started when "police tried to arrest

a marijuana smuggler in the city park where a disturbance broke out Sunday. The city has been placed under a state of civil emergency restriction. (AP Wirephoto)

A third person had been wounded there earlier by an armed employee of the store. A woman whose house was used by a volunteer medical aid group reported two others were treated for minor gunshot wounds in the early morning hours, but were not hospitalized.

There was a report from the Albuquerque Police Department during the night that one of the persons shot in the liquor store looting had died. However, no hospitals in the city reported any deaths, and LaRue said this morning that he had checked all hospitals and had no death report in connection with the disorder.

Dozens of persons were beaten or injured by thrown objects, tear gas, or smoke inhalation. A police lieutenant, Don Christian, estimated 30 to 50 buildings were damaged in the downtown area.

The latest arrests came this morning when police moved into the park, where several youths had returned after a foray into the downtown area. They arrested about 30 holdouts there. The males arrested in the park had been drinking heavily, apparently with liquor looted from the store, police said.

Police also moved on a residence in the area where a volunteer medical aid team—dubbed MASH—had been treating wounded persons. All members of the medical aid team were arrested.

Neenah-Menasha this fall." With greater area participation, he believes the students will be able to coordinate activities, travel to Chicago and Milwaukee, and check out colleges together.

Preparing students for college remains the backbone of the program. Brewer said 80 percent of those involved go on. "The schools they have been going to—Swarthmore, Cornell, Northwestern, Dartmouth, Stanford—these are the top schools in the country and they are making it with 'B' averages. Without the ABC program they wouldn't have had the opportunity to write to these campuses."

The colleges follow up with comprehensive financial aid packages.

Got Scholarships
Brewer, from Chicago, was a scholarship student at Lawrence. He has decided on a Ph.D. program in business and economics at the Massachusetts Institute of Technology. He also plans to become "fluent in law."

With the training, he said, he will work "not necessarily in business but in programs where I can work eventually for disadvantaged people. My ultimate goal is to help poor people. That's where the future of American is anyway."

Of his stay in this city, Brewer said, "My four years here have been a powerful learning experience for me. I've gotten to know people—to find partially what I've wanted to do. I don't think I've had a dull moment here. You have to be on top of everything if you are to succeed at Lawrence and in the Appleton. My academic career has been rigorous and intensive and I don't regret it one bit."

Valley Couple Volunteers for Brazil Service

A young couple from Appleton soon will be setting out for their second term of volunteer service in Brazil.

Robert S. Chase, son of Mr. and Mrs. Robert H. Chase, 508 McArthur St., and his wife, the former Susan Miller, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Arild Miller, 96 Estherbrook Ave., were Peace Corpsmen in Brazil in 1968 and 1969.

They have now volunteered through Church World Service for a year's work with Diaconia, an interchurch aid committee formed by Brazilian churches.

For the past two years the couple has been in Evanston, Ill., where Chase is a student at Garrett Seminary. Mrs. Chase has been employed by the Methodist Board of Pensions, Evanston, in statistical work.

Chase will be fulfilling the Seminary's requirement of a year's internship in the field through his work for Diaconia. The Brazilian church agency will assign him to a port where he will have responsibility for receiving imported cargoes of relief materials, supervising storage, and expediting delivery within the country to its final destination.

Diaconia is actively engaged in efforts to alleviate hunger and acute want which have been intensified by a severe two-year drought in northeastern Brazil, an already poverty-stricken region.

The agency, working through some 1,800 local committees, carries on a wide variety of food for work and community self-help projects throughout Brazil. It is expected that there will be an opportunity for Mrs. Chase, a former social worker, to use her skills within this area.

Really Worried' Appleton Boy Coasts to Derby Win

When Larry Strutz got his first checkered flag Sunday morning, a red-shirted Jaycee set his Cadillac-blue racer on official on the College Avenue racetrack shouted to the judges. "There's a boy who's going to win this one."

The official's prediction was right on the button. Larry, the 13-year-old son of Mr. and Mrs. Gerald Strutz, 2532 Oakwood Court, breezed through seven races and walked into the winner's circle in the 10th annual Appleton Soapbox Derby.

He'll be competing in the National Soapbox Derby at Akron, Ohio, in August. Really Worried' As the races went into the afternoon, the only person who didn't seem to know Larry would win was Larry himself. He said he was "really worried" all the way through. The tension showed on his face in the "pit" area behind the wooden derby platform. He set his Cadillac-blue racer on padded blocks and muffled over it, tight-lipped, waiting for the next competition.

Except for a brief shower that sent everyone running for cover, the races went off without a hitch. And Larry looked like a winner from the start. His stiffest challenge came from Jake Sarra, route 3, Fond du Lac, in a sleek yellow racer. But Jake, who was eliminated by the winner in the first round of last year, went up against the final victor Sunday in the second round. After that, Larry's leads weren't in doubt.

He defeated Tom Kelly, son of Mr. and Mrs. John Kelly, 333 S. Helen St., Kimberly, for the title. Tom won the 11- and 12-year old 'B' division, and took second place honors. Third place went to Randy West. After a kiss from Miss Soap Box Derby, Mary Ann Weber, and congratulations from the Jaycees, Larry stepped up to the public address microphone and answered a question about Akron. All the nervousness was gone and he fairly shouted into the microphone: "I'm going to win!"

He re-entered the same "soap box" he coasted last year, with some changes. "I trimmed off some of the weight, put in new axles this year and really worked on it," he said.

The Einstein Junior High School student said after the race that it had helped him "to work tools better." Driver and Technical Training Brings High Pay, Graduates Told

OSHKOSH — Many vocational and technically trained young men and women will step into higher paying jobs today than will their college graduate counterparts, some 270 Fox Valley Technical Institute graduates were told Sunday afternoon during 1971 commencement exercises.

Speaking at the Oshkosh High School-Civic Auditorium, the director of the Milwaukee Area Technical College said that even many doctor of philosophy and master's degree graduates are unemployed "because they don't really have any saleable skills."

Dr. William L. Ramsey noted that the question that personal managers ask is "What can you do?" That's the real test.

Ramsey described the college degree earned only for "so-called social standing" as "an exercise in futility."

No industry, the Milwaukee educator warned, will locate or expand in the Fox River Valley without "reasonable assurance" of a supply of vocationally trained middle management technicians.

Can Be Found In another part of his commencement address, Ramsey said he believes that "enthusiastic, smiling, responsible young Americans" are not as difficult to find today as it sometimes seems.

The other young people, those who exist in this country only because of the freedoms they seek to destroy," he added, "would not last 10 minutes in a communist society."

Ramsey told graduates that "as you grow older and wiser, and take your places in business, you will find that reasonable rules of conformity are good. We have to have them."

He said that responsibility, good manners, and loyalty to community, nation and employer are at least as important as excellence in academic subjects.

Set Sights High "Set your sights high but don't be despondent if the road to success and profit seems endless," Ramsey told the FVTI class of 1971.

"Continuing education, both formal and informal, and development of personal traits go hand in hand on the road to success," the commencement speaker concluded.

The class was presented for graduation by William M. Sirek, the board of Vocational, Technical and Adult Education District 12. He was assisted by Stanley Spanbauer, assistant director of Clintonville, president of instructional services, FVTI.

Great Britain Native "The Physical Environment: The Ultimate Political Program?" is the topic of a lecture by Patrick Horsburgh on July 14. Horsburgh, a native of Great Britain, is professor of architecture at the University of Notre Dame. Horsburgh will be the keynote speaker earlier the same day at a three-day workshop on regional planning at UWGB. The seminars, open to the public, will be sponsored by the Wisconsin Bureau of Local and Regional Planning, Madison, the American Institute of Professional Geologists, and the regional analysis concentration at UWGB.

Noted sociologist David Riesman will speak on "Cultural Conflict in the University" on July 15. The author of "The Lonely Crowd" and "Fables in the Crowd," Riesman has been a professor in social sciences at Harvard University since 1958. In recent years his research has been primarily concerned with the development and present state of American higher education.

The subject "Ecosystem Management: A New Venture for Mankind" will be discussed by Eugene Odum Aug. 5. Odum is director of the Institute of Ecology at the University of Georgia. His publications include four books, more than 100 papers in professional journals, and numerous popular articles on ecological themes.

All lectures in the series are open to the public without charge, and begin at 8:15 p.m. in the main campus lecture hall.

Warren Hits White Collar College Bias

FOND DU LAC, Wis. (AP) — Colleges have encouraged campus skepticism by not encouraging students to take more interest in technological education, Atty. Gen. Robert Warren said Friday.

"We simply cannot continue to encourage the kind of college-mania that has produced thousands of graduates for whom no useful jobs can be found at a time when we are desperately short of craftsmen, artisans, skilled workers and technicians," Warren said.

His remarks were prepared for graduation ceremonies at the vocational and technical institute in Fond du Lac.

"It is ironic," he said, "that man's entire store of knowledge is found in books that could not have transmitted wisdom through the ages without the skills of the printer and the master bookbinder."

Warren said that the vocational and technical education system is "the only system that has produced a high percentage of graduates who are actually employed."

Group Calculates Local Losses in Lucey's Tax Plan

FOX POINT — With Gov. Lucey's shared tax revision plan cities that are members of the Alliance of Cities. A strong budget from the friendly supporter of shared tax reform. Assembly to the hostile Senate, the Alliance has been a less an opposition pressure group, ardent backer of the governor's, has forecast high costs and few proposals than of the similar benefits from the plan in the Tarr Task Force redistribution plan that will killed by the State Senate in 1969.

The Committee for Tax Sense, a spin-off of the League of Suburban Municipalities, calculates that if the plan had been in effect last year it would have cost Outagamie County a net total of $903,697, and Winnebago County $1.5 million and Calumet County $267,791.

The county-wide figures can be misleading, however, since some communities, come out ahead even though on the whole the county loses.

Two figures are a combination of reduced shares of state-collected taxes and increased personal income taxes in the three counties.

The reductions in shared taxes would result from revisions in formulas now used to determine how much a community receives from the state.

$26 Million
The income tax increases are based on the governor's proposal to add $26 million to the sum currently being divided among state communities.

The committee figures also show the estimated impact of the Lucey plan on individual communities. Six of the 23 Winnebago County communities, six of 17 in Calumet and 15 of 33 in Outagamie would come out in the black, and the rest would lose, according to the organization.

Outagamie County would pay a $657,362 individual income tax hike, coupled with a net loss of $246,333 in shared taxes. Winnebago County would pay $772,387 more in income taxes and lose $773,633 in shared taxes. Calumet would pay $124,765 in higher income taxes and lose $143,026 in shared taxes.

an annual dollar drain of $477,048, Neenah a loss of $406,147, Menasha a loss of $166,933 and Oshkosh a loss of $157,029."

Department of Revenue
The changes in shared tax revenues have been calculated by the Wisconsin Department of Revenue. The impact of the personal income tax was estimated by Dr. Alan H. Smith, a professor of finance at Marquette University, assisting the opposition group.

The figures were first presented in April to the legislature during hearings on the redistribution plan, but they attracted little notice. During the past week, the organization sent news releases to local media, and in addition at least one Republican legislator who also opposes the proposals issued a similar press release.

The secretary of the organization, Paul Larson, a Fox Point public relations man, admitted that the figures are not up to date. The portion showing the impact of revising the shared tax formula fails to include modifications made in payments to municipalities that have power utility property in their boundaries.

But in general the differences are minor. Appleton's loss in shared taxes is reported by Larson's group as $86,684. The latest figure from the Department of Revenue is $101,272. Neenah and Oshkosh, the other two Valley members of the Alliance of Cities, similarly come out better in the Tax Sense summary than in the latest state figures reported by the Alliance.

The Tax Sense group also went to the state agency for basic data before Prof. Smith calculated the impact of the income tax hike.

A spokesman for the Department of Revenue commented that Prof. Smith "did about the best job that could be done. We didn't attempt to do it ourselves."

Tax Breakdown
The spokesman explained that Smith obtained the department's 1968 state income tax figures broken down community by community. That is the most recent year for which such a breakdown is available.

The $26 million income tax boost for shared tax purposes was simply spread over the communities in the same proportions as their shares of the 1968 personal income tax.

"It's a rough method. That's about all you can do, really," the spokesman said, adding that it is subject to error because Lucey also has proposed changes in corporate and high-bracket personal income taxes.

Larson said the impact of the income tax increase is "the thing that the Department of Revenue hasn't wanted to talk about." The public, he said, at least should have a chance to weigh the net effect of the shared tax-income tax combination.

The Assembly Friday approved without significant change Gov. Lucey's proposals which go next to the Senate. While the Democratic majority in the Assembly handled the Democratic governor's budget kindly, the Republican-controlled Senate is expected to virtually rewrite the entire measure. The Committee for Tax Sense publicity campaign coincides with the start of the Senate deliberations.

Winds Cause Heavy Damage in Chilton Area

CHILTON — High Winds, heavy rain and hail up to three-quarters of an inch in diameter caused considerable damage late Saturday night and early Sunday morning in the Chilton area.

Near tornado velocity winds toppled large trees and downed branches. Three large trees were felled at the James Ludwig farm, route 1. Two just missed the family home and landed on an aluminum greenhouse. Another fell directly on a path to the milk house and had to be cut up before Ludwig could get to the barn to do chores Sunday morning.

Wisconsin Public Service received reports of minor damage to customers' homes when winds and branches ripped power lines from buildings. No major loss of power was experienced and no fires were reported.

Public Service crews were out Sunday pulling limbs from wires and uprighting poles that had been tipped in the storm.

A large "Chilton Welcomes You" sign on U.S. 151 west of the city reportedly was blown apart.

Water was backed up at manholes in the city from the 1 1/2 inches of rain that fell between 10:20 and 11 p.m. Saturday. Another .10 of an inch of rain fell between 2 and 2:30 a.m. Sunday.

The General Telephone Co. in Plymouth reported no major outages of service. There were, however, some scattered incidents of interrupted service due to fallen limbs.

Gale-Like Winds that swept through the Chilton 108 N. State St. The limb nearly crashed through a bay window in the home. (Connors Photo)

Senate Passes Bill to Protect National Guard

Measure Provides State Paid Attorney In Case of Charges

MADISON — An uneasiness that has affected National Guardsmen since an Ohio State Grand Jury investigation of the incidents surrounding the deaths of four students on the Kent State University campus at the hands of the National Guard, would be alleviated by a bill that passed the Senate easily Thursday.

The measure provides that the governor must name a state-financed attorney to represent any National Guard member charged as a result of action in his capacity as a member of the guard. At present the governor, on the advice of the attorney general, may appoint an attorney.

Sen. Kurt Frank, an officer in the Wisconsin National Guard told the Senate that officers are fearful of giving orders and enlisted men are wary of following orders during disturbance duty as a result of the concern that they may be charged and have to pay an attorney to defend themselves as a result of their action. The bill would relieve that outside concern and bring more order and obedience to the ranks, he said.

Without discussion the Senate passed a measure that would make punishment of traffic violations uniform throughout the state. The bill would remove the present element of chance that determines whether a person is prosecuted in a civil or criminal proceeding and do whether he will be subject to forfeiture or imprisonment.

The bill categorizes types of traffic violations and sets procedures for making a deposit with the court to pay a forfeiture for failure to appear for civil citations and lists offenses to be considered as criminal violations. All are to be treated uniformly throughout the state whether the violator is arrested by municipal, county or state officers and whether he is taken to a municipal or county court. Forfeitures would be permitted for the first violation of state laws including: reasonable and prudent speed, requirement of filing accident report, driving under the influence of alcohol, narcotic or dangerous drug, reckless driving, employment of a drunken operator, failure of garage to keep record of accident damage repairs, and falsifying an accident report. Criminal action would be required for second violations of these laws. All local ordinances and other state laws not regarded as criminal offenses would be considered civil offenses.

Possible imprisonment could be ordered for violation of these criminal laws: fleeing from an officer, driving after suspension or revocation, violation of duties after a personal injury or property damage accident, causing injury by negligent driving when drunk or by reckless driving and motor vehicle fraud incidents.

New London Girl Selected for Tour

NEW LONDON — A three week tour of England, Belgium, France and the Netherlands would be enough of a dream tour, but add Russia and the fact that you will be performing with an outstanding wind band, and you have Karen Algiers' August plans.

Karen is one of 12 students from Wisconsin and 86 from the United States, who will be playing in the United States Collegiate Wind Band, when it goes on tour this summer. The band is under the direction of Prof. Al G. Wright, Purdue University.

The combination flutist and piccolo artist will perform in concert in London, Paris, Brussels and Moscow among other European capitals.

Karen's name was submitted for the band by her director, Don Griebenow. She received an application for the band, applied, and was notified of her acceptance. "I didn't know he had put my name in" she remarked, adding that she was definitely eager to go on the trip.

For Karen the tour will actually begin on August 4, when she flies to New York. After an overnight stay she and other members of the groups will board their flight to Brussels.

Brussels will be the site of the first rehearsal of the band as a unit, as well as for the first concert.

She will also cross the English Channel by boat. Upon her return in late August, Karen will enter as a freshman at the Mercy Hospital School of Nursing.

She is presently employed at New London Community Hospital where she works in admissions and at the switchboard.

Karen is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Edgar Algiers, 112 W. Quincy St., New London.

ABC Program Proving Its Value, Tutor Says

BY ROBERT LAUX
Post-Crescent Staff Writer

"In my general conversations with guys who graduated from the Appleton ABC program," said tutor Eli Brewer, "there are guys who are going into medicine, into law and into business. They are not going to stop their education right with college. They are truly the leaders of tomorrow."

Brewer had been with the Appleton "A Better Chance" program since its beginning in the 1969-70 school year. He lived with the high school boys in the ABC house, 416 E. Washington St., helping them with academic subjects and personal problems, serving as a friend and model.

Brewer, who got his bachelor's degree Saturday from Lawrence University summed up his feelings about the ABC program:

Experience
"I think it has been a learning experience for me and I jump at the chance to help the young brothers and sisters any time I have a chance to do it."

Besides assisting youths from poor communities and inadequate school systems, he said he came to grips with himself through the program — "for the first two years I was struggling with myself" — and clarified his personal objectives. "By seeing them grow, I have grown a lot myself."

Brewer feels the Appleton program has been a definite success as an "intensive educational program." He said, "You find out after working here that academics isn't that difficult, that it's mostly a matter of psychology, of gaining a realistic perspective of yourself and the ability to adjust to any situation. Appleton has given the guys a chance to prove themselves. Back in their communities they didn't have the chance to show what they could do."

When the 10 students return to their homes, he said, they resume their normal lives in the communities, but suffer no real break with the ABC program and "know how to deal with people much better."

Helping Blacks
He adds that, "any program that takes an educationally underprivileged youth from the inner city to Appleton to give him the opportunity to compete with other students here is definitely helping the black community," and said, "These are the leaders of tomorrow. They have to be able to deal with every ethnic group. Appleton allows them to do that — any white community, allows them to do that."

Brewer praised those persons directly involved in the boys' house and the girls' at 739 Alton St. "I think the program here has improved since I've been in it. The administration — the ABC board — won't let the program die. They have the will and I'm sure they'll find the way to make the ABC program survive in Appleton. It's really unfortunate that I won't be able to see it grow, but at least I was involved in the initial program."

Participation
Brewer said, "What's really going to help the ABC in Appleton are the programs starting up in Oshkosh and Turn to Page 3, Col. 1

Building Damaged by Auto in New London

NEW LONDON — Griffin's Transport Station, 703 N. Shaw St., was damaged about 5:30 a.m. Saturday, when an auto smashed through the building's front and then left the scene.

David Schbronski, Menasha, was later questioned by the Clintonville Police Department, and admitted the incident, after information had been forwarded by the New London Police Department.

An informant called the New London Police Department and reported seeing Schbronski's damaged auto in Bear Creek. The sighting reportedly took place about an hour after the incident.

Little League Discontinued

WEYAUWEGA — Parents of the Weyauwega-Fremont Little League have withdrawn their petition to be presented to the annual district meeting in July. This petition would outline the benefits to the youngsters from the Central Wisconsin League this summer high school athletic program, all boys within the school district between the ages of nine and 14. It usually attracts from 60 to 80 boys each summer.

The action by the school board reversed a ten-year policy which allows the Little League to use the bus.

School Supt. Merle Jarchow said he thought the school board's decision resulted because the bus service favored those from the city over those of the rural areas. Most Little League participants are from the city he said.

Jarchow also explained that the board was concerned that the service should be made available to one group while excluding others as Boy Scouts or 4-H Clubs.

Parents have said it would not be feasible to transport the 40 youngsters in private automobiles. It is generally regarded a hazard.

It also was noted that the other eight teams in the league use school buses.

Ed Hildebrand, Little League coach for 15 years, has resigned. Parents plan to circulate a

Mike Hegan Sold to A's

First Baseman Was Hitting .221 For Brewers

MILWAUKEE (AP) — The Milwaukee Brewers have sold first baseman Mike Hegan, a solid glove man with a light batting average this year, to the Oakland Athletics in a straight cash deal, the club said today.

Hegan became expendable when the Brewers traded popular left fielder Danny Walton to New York this month for first baseman Frank Epedino and a minor leaguer.

The Brewers also said they have added Rob Ellis, a hard-hitting third baseman from Michigan State, to their active roster, replacing Hegan. Ellis, an all Big Ten pick, was the Brewers' first pick in the second phase of the baseball draft. He was signed Saturday.

Hegan is batting .221 this season. The Brewers did not disclose the amount of cash involved saying only that it was more than the waiver price. The club did say at least one other team was interested in Hegan.

Nip Hansen, Heino in NEWGA Best-Ball Wahl, Floberg Win Crown

ANTIGO — Green Bay Oneida's Nic Wahl and Tom Floberg won the Northeastern Wisconsin Golf Association best ball tournament title here Sunday.

They beat Manitowish Branch River's Pete Hansen and Gene Heino on Wahl's 12-foot birdie putt on the 19th hole.

It was the third best-ball honor for Wahl. He had shared the other two titles (1956 and '58) with Jim White. Floberg had won it once before — with Roger Eberhard (1968).

Floberg and Wahl were two up after 13 holes of the finals, but Hansen and Heino won the 14th and 16th to force the overtime.

Hansen and Heino had eliminated Fox Valley's Pete Benson and Tom Hanby, 4 and 3, in the semi-final. Wahl and Floberg had stopped White and Paul

Indians Blast Brewers, 11-0

CLEVELAND, Ohio (AP) — Cleveland Indians Manager Alvin Dark thinks pitcher Sam McDowell eased up a little after the Tribe notched 10 runs in the first three innings Sunday to romp over the Milwaukee Brewers 11-0.

"Sam pitched hard when he had to, but after we got him those first 10 runs in the first three innings, I think he eased up a little and just tried to get the game over," Dark said.

McDowell (7-5) acknowledged "I was thinking no-hitter," but Rich Auerbach, who had a .174 batting average going into the game, lashed a double to left in the sixth for the Brewers' first hit.

McDowell, who walked four and struck out nine, loaded the bases with walks in the sixth and was nicked for a single by Dave May in the seventh, but finished his ninth two-hitter of his career and his second of the season.

Dark said McDowell is "as good right now as he was any time last year. Sam is all the way caught up now."

Hits 10th Homer

Graig Nettles' 10th homer and Frank Baker's first were the big blows in the 10-run spurge as the Indians rapped 15 hits, including three each by Jack Heidemann and Ray Foshe.

It was the Indians' eighth victory in their last 10 games and their 20th in 30 games dating back to May 9.

"This is the looziest I felt and the best fast ball I had all year," McDowell said. "When I ran into trouble, I said, 'Here it is, hit it if you can.' I tried to lay it down the middle, but I couldn't. I guess you might call it a great game the first five innings, a lousy game the next two and a pretty good one the last two."

"When I tried to lay the ball in there and couldn't I got mad at myself, and when I got mad at myself, I've got the game won," the tall southpaw said.

Have Breakfast

McDowell and teammate Gover Hodge have had breakfast! "Gover had a church break-fast commitment with coach Cot Deal," McDowell said. "So I ordered two breakfasts at a motel coffee shop and had the waitress put them in a sack. We had breakfast in the clubhouse. Gover is fantastic. I tell you."

K-C Steals Win From Boston

By HERSCHEL NISSENSEN Associated Press Sports Writer

Everything's up to date in Kansas City except the Boston Red Sox, who are falling behind. Behind the Baltimore Orioles and Detroit Tigers, that is.

The red-hot Kansas City Royals made it six straight over the Red Sox Sunday with a 4-3 victory that dumped Boston into third place in the American League East, five games behind the Orioles and one-half game in back of the Tigers, who trimmed Minnesota 9-5.

The Royals, meanwhile, have won five in a row and 11 of their last 12 and pulled within five games of Oakland in the AL West as the A's bowed to the New York Yankees 5-1.

Nats Top California

Elsewhere, Baltimore edged the Chicago White Sox 2-1 as Mike Cuellar posted his eighth consecutive triumph. Cleveland blasted Milwaukee 11-0 behind Sam McDowell's two-hit pitching and Washington beat California 5-2.

The Royals, who started Boston's slide with a three-game sweep in Fenway Park two weeks ago, kept it going with three weekend victories, giving the Red Sox four straight defeats and 11 in their last 14 games. Sunday, however, was the first time they had to come from behind.

Whether it's jumping out in front or coming from behind, the Royals are running wild. They stole four more bases Sunday, giving them 44 in 56 attempts. Freddie Patek swiped second and third in the first inning to set up a run and Ted Savage stole third in the fifth and scored on a single by Patek.

Siebert Loses

The Royals broke a 3-all tie in the sixth inning and pined Sonny Siebert with his third straight setback on Chuck Harrison's infield hit, a walk and Jerry May's run-scoring single. Willie Horton drove in five runs with his 13th homer, a double and single to pace the Tigers past the faltering Twins. Tony Taylor, a veteran National Leaguer making his AL debut, but, and Ike Brown also had three hits apiece, with Brown delivering his fifth home run.

Aaron Cracks No. 19

Braves' Rookie Slams Pair of Homers, Leads 9-0 Shelling of Astros

By KEN RAPPOPORT Associated Press Sports Writer

Earl Williams finally is getting his chance at third base. Well, better late than early.

Williams, who couldn't crack the lineup when Cleve Boyer was with the Atlanta Braves, is making the best of his opportunity now that the veteran's gone.

Atlanta's swinging rookie infielder knocked in six runs with two homers Sunday, leading the Braves to a 9-0 shelling of the Houston Astros.

"You have days like that," said Williams, who always seems to play his best as a fill-in for Boyer, the slick third baseman released recently after a squabble with management.

When Boyer was sick earlier this year, Williams played third during a three-game series with Philadelphia and had a party at the plate with three homers among his seven hits.

The high-tailing Pittsburgh Pirates ripped the slumping St. Louis Cardinals 8-4; the hot Los Angeles Dodgers clouted the Montreal Expos 7-1; the San Diego Padres nipped the Philadelphia Phillies 9-8; the Cincinnati Reds stopped the Chicago Cubs 4-3 in 11 innings and the New York Mets edged the San Francisco Giants 5-4 in 10.

Not First Time

It wasn't the first time Williams hit two homers in one game. He hit a pair in that Philadelphia series on April 17.

"The thing that stands out most in my mind is that the two homers came against big league pitching," said Williams of his two, three-run shots Sunday. "A guy like Don Wilson is a great pitcher. I never faced the other pitcher (Buddy Harris)."

Does Williams feel the pressure trying to fill Cleve's shoes? "I don't try to emulate Boyer or to be his successor," he said.

Aaron Homers

In between the Williams' power display, Hank Aaron lashed homer No. 19 and the 611th of his career. Pat Jarvis fired a five-hitter for his second victory in a row after seven losses.

Richie Hebner's three-run homer capped a five-run uprising in the ninth to help Pittsburgh hammer St. Louis and maintain first place in the National League East by 2½ games over New York. The Pirates have won four in a row and 12 of 16 and St. Louis, which dropped 3½ games behind in third, has lost six straight and 10 of 13.

The Cardinals had taken a 4-3 lead with two runs in the sixth on Jim Beauchamp's double. Ted Sizemore's single, an error by second baseman Dave Gorman and a single by Luis Maloney

Robby Valentine hit his first major league home run, a three-run inh in the second inning, and added three more singles as Los Angeles took its 19th victory in 16 games and climbed within six games of front-running San Francisco in the West.

3-Run Unriving

Valentine singled to start another three-run uprising in the sixth and drove in a run in the eighth with his final hit.

Johnson Gets Key Hit

Foxes Win, Retain Lead of 2 Games

WATERLOO, Ia. — Lamar Johnson's 2-run single highlighted a 4-run seventh inning rally as the Appleton Foxes beat Waterloo, 6-4, Sunday afternoon for their fourth straight win.

The win enabled Appleton to maintain its 2-game edge over runnerup Cedar Rapids in the Northern Division of the Midwest League.

Appleton trailed, 2-1, going into the seventh, but knocked Waterloo starter and loser Randy Hammon from the box. Dan Rourke and Edito Artega singled and Adrian Kenary sacrificed to open the frame.

Mike Nichols came in and got Ross Sapp on strikes before loading the bases with a walk to Brian Downing. Rourke tied the game on Bob Servoss' passed ball, and Jerry Hariston walked to again fill the bases and set the stage for Johnson.

Slaps Second Hit

Johnson slapped his second hit of the day to left, scoring Artega and Downing. Sam Ewing followed with a single to score Hariston with the fourth run of the inning.

Appleton opened the scoring in the first on singles by Sapp, Hariston and Johnson. The Foxes' final run came in the eighth when Artega reached first on an error, Eugene Koon sacrificed and Sapp singled.

A double by Rex Goodson and single by Jeff Stout tied the game in the bottom of the first for the Royals.

Waterloo took the lead in the fifth on a single by Tom Poquette, a balk, and infield out, and a single by Stout.

The Royals added two more in the ninth on hits by Servoss and Poquette and a 2-run single by Jim Smith.

Kenary picked up his fourth win of the season against one loss. The tall right-hander worked six innings, giving up two runs, eight hits, three walks and three strikeouts. Koon pitched the final three innings and issued two runs, three hits, and fanned two.

Appleton and Waterloo meet again tonight.

Johnson's 2-run single highlighted a 4-run seventh inning rally as the Appleton Foxes beat Waterloo, 6-4, Sunday afternoon for their fourth straight win.

Tips 3 in Playoff

Barrage of Birdies Gives Weiskopf Dramatic Victory

BY BOB GREEN

CHARLOTTE, N.C. (AP) — "It's like shooting craps," Tom Weiskopf said of his playoff victory over Dale Douglass, Lee Trevino and South African Gary Player in the $150,000 Kemper Open Golf Tournament.

Weiskopf, who broke a three-year victory drought with his dramatic, come-from-behind triumph Sunday, was talking about the use of sudden-death to settle ties after 72 holes.

"If you've got more than one player, then sudden-death isn't really a major test. A lot of luck enters into it.

"If you're playing head to head with just one man, it may be a little more fair. I don't really like it. I'd only played in two before, and lost in both of those."

"It's a joke," said Player, one of the world's foremost players, who now has a poor, 3-10 record in playoffs. Trevino and Douglass fled the Quail Hollow Country Club course without comment.

Starts Drive

All four had finished the regulation 72 holes at 277, 11 under par. Weiskopf was six strokes off the pace, being set by Douglass, when he started the drive that brought him the victory.

He reeled off birdies on the final four holes, sinking putts of 10, 10, 8 and 18 feet.

Weiskopf, Trevino and Player — who had a fantastic four-putts on one green — all had final rounds 69s on the 7,278-yard, par 72 layout and Douglass had a 70.

They went to the 596-yard, par-five 15th hole to begin the playoff. All were on in three, with Weiskopf about eight feet away. The other three missed birdie attempts in the 12-20 foot range before Weiskopf lined it up, stepped away once, then stroked it home for his fifth birdie in a row.

The $30,000 first prize pushed his earnings for the year to $60,367.

"I was so nervous, I was shaking so bad I just had to step away from the putt," said tall Tom, who was hailed as a potential super star after winning twice in 1968. He hadn't won since.

Starts Pressing

"After I won those two," the handsome, 28-year-old said, "I thought I could win 'em all, win every time I went out. I started pressing, pressing to shoot a 68 or 69 every round. And I went into a slump."

"Then last year, I'd done pretty well. I didn't win a tournament, but I had the low stroke average on the tour and won almost $100,000, so I didn't play after Labor Day."

"I just took four months off and went hunting."

"I think my game suffered a little because of it, but I've been working on it very hard. The hardest I ever have."

"I think my game is coming back. I think I am coming back."

"For a while I was beginning to wonder if I was ever going to win another tournament."

"But I don't think I have reached my potential. And I don't think I have worked as hard on my game as I can."

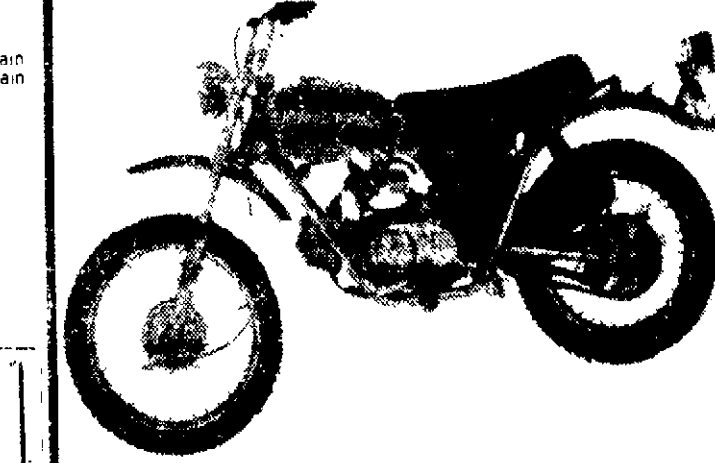

Trevino, Player and Douglass each picked up $11,600.

Two strokes back of them were Bob Lunn, the second and third-round leader who slipped to a final 73, George Johnson and Rod Funseth, tied at 279.

Arnold Palmer never really got it going, had a final 72 and finished in a tie for 12th at 281.

Deceit Shrouds War Strategy

The most disturbing aspect of the study conducted by the Pentagon to show how the United States became so heavily involved in Vietnam is the deliberate misleading of the American public.

The study was ordered by former Secretary of Defense Robert McNamara. It demonstrated the gradual trend toward war beginning with President Truman's decision to give military aid to France in the latter's struggle to retain its colonial control of Indochina. President Eisenhower reportedly resisted the advice of Secretary of State John Foster Dulles and his Vice President, Richard Nixon, that we give all out aid to the French but, according to the report, our government officially contributed to the breakdown of the Geneva Accords of 1954 which called for Vietnamese elections to determine the nature of the government of the entire nation. President Kennedy became somewhat disillusioned with President Diem and Kennedy's Ambassador to Saigon, Henry Cabot Lodge, may have intimated that the overthrow, although not the murder of Diem, could be advantageous.

But it was under President Johnson that the nation moved into its open role in an effort to maneuver a military victory. It is clear, as suspected for a long time, that the incidents in the Tonkin Bay, if not actually intended as a provocation to the North Vietnamese and an excuse to expand the war by bombing raids in the North, was thoroughly planned for its psychological value. Raids on North Vietnam had been going on secretly both on land and by air since early in 1964. The American people knew nothing of these attacks. They were not aware that North Vietnamese were being kidnapped to gain information, that sabotage and psychological warfare teams were being parachuted into the North, that bridges were being blown up by commando teams sent in by sea, or that gunboats were bombarding the North Vietnamese coast. It is obviously small wonder that the North Vietnamese reacted in fear when our destroyers steamed into the Bay of Tonkin. A "provocative strategy" was then proposed by the Joint Chiefs of Staff to repeat the actions and be used as a pretext for bombing the North. Congress, outraged at the attacks on the destroyers and not knowing the background, authorized the President to take whatever moves were necessary to protect our interests in the area — sort of an unofficial declaration of war as we and many uncomfortable Congressmen have come to find out.

The report shows that President Johnson preferred not to have the United States committed to open combat but he ordered the early 1964 aggressive actions on the theory that "progressively escalating pressure" would bring Hanoi to terms, although intelligence officials doubted it. And constantly, even since President Truman, Americans were bombarded with the dangers of Communist aggression, real at one time probably but less and less as time went on. It is small wonder that the ordinary American continues to see international affairs as the black of the Communist world and the white of the good guys of anti-Communist regimes.

So now we know. But we do not know how far the present Administration is going in the same direction of keeping secret our activities in Indochina. President Nixon repeats at every news conference and almost every speech the myth of a South Vietnamese people ready and able to choose the government they want and the ability to defend it as an easily attainable goal before all our troops are brought home. In spite of the obvious failure of our air raids on the North to change Hanoi's attitude, we continue to launch massive raids on jungle and village. The violence and devastation we have loosed upon Indochina, however noble our motives, are not mentioned by the White House. Opponents to the war and doubters of President Nixon's plan to get us out are still referred to as kooks.

Admittedly all diplomacy cannot be performed in the glaring light of complete public view. But democracy and representative government are threatened when so many secrets are kept from the voters. No wonder there was and is a serious credibility gap which, strictly speaking, means that Americans do not trust their elected officials to tell the truth.

Play Acting in Madison

What promises to be a protracted and tiresome struggle between the Democratic assembly and a Republican senate in the Wisconsin legislature on the issue of Gov. Lucey's budget and tax proposal for the biennium will be an exercise in pretense to a considerable degree.

Perhaps the average resident of Wisconsin whose public services and tax dollars are at stake in the wearisome, predictable debates and voting patterns is aware that much of what is going on is mere posturing, since the legislative galleries have had fewer visitors in recent days than ever before during the current legislative session.

The reality is that Gov. Lucey's spending proposals, for all of the hand wringing of his Republican critics, are not essentially different in degree from the budget propositions submitted by other recent state Republican administrations. The ratio of expenditure increase Mr. Lucey has asked is about the same as that of former Gov. Knowles' last term, in defiance of the "austerity" label he has shrewdly tried to attach to it.

The question truly is not the adjustment in spending aggregates that will be authorized. The pattern of expenditure inflation since World War II has been consistent. There is no reason of which we are aware that a Democratic regime should now change it significantly, and surely not in a downward direction.

The issue is how it will be financed — who will pay for it. Here again, the record is the best guide. Whether they admit it or not, both parties have mandatory positions.

The governor's party, following his lead, insists upon putting principal reliance upon the income tax, individual and corporate, to gather in additional revenues. There is a certain inevitability about that position. Gov. Lucey is more keenly aware, perhaps, than some of his loyalists in the ranks about the forced rigidity of his position here. He and his party campaigned successfully with a day in and day out denunciation of the Republicans for having broadened the sales tax in 1969. There is discomfiture among them for having failed to make even a small gesture toward reducing that levy they persuaded many voters to believe was an evil and unfair thing as recently as last November. To propose an additional sales tax now would surely bring angry cries of betrayal from many constituents.

But the Republicans have no greater freedom of action, in a realistic analysis. They know that the campaign against "their sales tax" last year cost them heavily, and surely was one of the reasons why they lost many seats in the legislature as well as the crucial office of governor. It is not a desirable time to counter Lucey's income tax boosts, curiously discriminatory as they are, with a sales tax substitute.

The only other route is to attempt to prune back the Lucey spending prescription. But that is more easily talked about than achieved. The big spending causes are popular ones. There is no reason to believe that Republicans could gain electoral favor today by standing for state service levels below those they authorized during their days of victory and power. Thus, the sounds and the furies in the capitol today signify very little — except that politicians of both parties are uncertain about the popular temper. State spending growth will continue in the usual pattern. The state tax load will expand correspondingly.

Democrats Have Massive Job Preparing for 1972 Election

BY JOHN P. ROCHE

From the very force of having to try to say something worthwhile three times a week, a columnist tends to get micro-vision. He goes to New York, talks to pols, and announces "Humphrey is Up; Muskie Down." The following week he hits Los Angeles and notices "McGovern Igniting Liberals," and then on to

Roche

Pennsylvania where "Muskie Easily Leads in Drive for Nomination." So it goes week in, week out, even though the commentator is perfectly aware that all his trees do not make a forest, that the political world can change in six months.

However, without trying to discover how the "average voter" in Dubuque feels about life, certain generalizations can be made about the 1972 election that are necessary if one is to have any perspective on events over the next year and a half. First of all, the Democrats must disabuse themselves of the myth that the 1968 election was "close." Because of the appalling eccentricities of our electoral system, President Nixon beat Hubert Humphrey by only a whisker. However, in aggregate terms 57 per cent of the electorate voted against the liberal Democrat. In other words, the Democrats start with 43 per cent as Square One.

Second, the G.O.P., in historical terms, did very well in the Congressional elections of 1970. And Mr. Nixon, despite all the noise, seems to hold steady in the Gallup rating around 50 per cent. He has a remarkable immunity to both love and hate, a kind of chilly competence which infuriates a number of journalists but impresses people. As I watch ed his latest press conference, where several liberal correspondents tried to corner him on the behavior of the Washington police during the Mayday disorders, all I could hear was the cash-register ringing up votes. His reply to one questioner, who was almost incoherent with rage, was worth a cool million. It seemed as though Mr. Nixon, alone in the room, recalled that Frank Rizzo, the former police chief, won the Democratic nomination for mayor of Philadelphia by an absolute majority.

Leaving Mr. Nixon at 50 per cent, let us explore another variable. Will George Wallace be back in force in 1972 — or will he have second-act trouble? At the moment he is talking a good fight, but a steady stream of reliable reports from the South indicate that he has begun to commit the mortal sin of American politics: boring the sovereign electorate. If Wallace folds, where will his votes go? To a liberal Democrat? This is not merely a question in the South, though that is where Wallace cut most deeply in 1968. Please recall that in 1968 Hubert Humphrey did not carry New York or Pennsylvania by an absolute majority.

Which brings us to the Democrats, bankrupt, divided, and squabbling. What will happen at next year's Democratic National Convention? Under the McGovern rules, designed to reform delegate selection, there may be as many as 15 contested delegations. That's for openers. (One pessimistic old Democratic sage observed that by the time they get the delegations straightened out, anyone with an American Express Credit Card will probably be entitled to vote.)

The convention will have been preceded by a long set of primaries that will have left everybody broke, and perhaps as significantly, exhausted from internecine warfare.

It will be vital to glue the party together, but in politics money is the essential coagulant. Who will have any? As of today the Democratic National Committee is more than $9 million in the hole. All in all, it is a somber picture, which may account (indeed, the paranoids insist it does account) for Senator Edward Kennedy's taking the veil. Running against an incumbent President is always tough (the experts figure incumbency is normally worth from 5 to 10 points), but 1972 looks like the hardest year since 1956.

Most Lenses Made For Myopic Eyes

NEW YORK (AP) — Approximately 66 per cent of all corrective lenses produced by American optical manufacturers are for myopics, or nearsighted people, says the Society for Visual Care.

Early indications of nearsightedness in children can often be detected by alert parents. If a child has excessively large eyeballs, squints frequently, has tearing eyes or complains of difficulty in seeing the school blackboard, he may have myopia. An eye examination, by an ophthalmologist or an optometrist, is recommended.

Wisconsin Report

'People Power' Has A Nice Ring But Isn't Too Practical

BY JOHN WYNGAARD

Post-Crescent Madison Bureau

MADISON — Sen. Ernest Keppler of Sheboygan, an agreeable politician who serves as the floor quarterback of the Republican majority in the State Senate, wants to arouse public opinion on the idea of what he calls "people power."

The people do not have sufficient control of some of the aspects of enlarging modern government that are so important in their lives and increasingly costly to their purses, he says in what he acknowledges is a lengthy appeal dispatched to editors and writers of the Wisconsin press.

He believes that the most urgent need for more direct popular power in the management of public affairs is in the huge system of publicly financed higher education in Wisconsin. The Republican senator in effect says he believes with Democratic Gov. Lucey that there should be a single board to run a merged system, but he parts company with the governor with a demand that the governing board be chosen by direct vote of the people.

Doesn't Apply Broadly
As somebody said about certain kinds of music, the Keppler theme sounds better than it is.

The first reservation that intrudes upon an examination of his thesis and the extensive exposition that accompanies it is his failure to apply his "people power" principle more broadly.

Is the board of the university really more important in that regard than many of the other major public agencies that touch the lives of the people of Wisconsin daily and more concretely?

What can be more important than having a public health service of competence and integrity and responsibility? There are literally scores of regulatory agencies that wield great powers and the performance or default of which would have a more immediate effect upon the average man and woman than the desultory doings of the university board which mostly contents itself with ratifying the wishes of the appointive educational bureaucracy.

Other Agencies Important

What agency is more constantly in the eye of a critical constituency than the State Department of Natural Resources? Does anybody seriously propose that its board should be elected? Or the head of the State Departments of revenue, transportation, or agriculture?

Such men are chosen by an elected governor who is subject to the constant scrutiny of the electorate. There is no other way in which a modern government could be run effectively. To recruit all of the officers of a state by way of election would make the ballot so long as to be impracticable. Many earnest students of politics believe that electoral reform must proceed, indeed, in the opposite direction, toward a shorter ballot.

Mr. Keppler exaggerates the powers of the regents, in practice if not in legal theory, when he demands that their seats be filled by men and women chosen directly by the people. This is not the appropriate time for an appraisal of the qualities of the regents, past or present.

Some Wouldn't Run

But no one who pretends to be informed is likely to dispute the idea that most of the men who were regarded as the most effective and responsible regents would not have submitted themselves to a political campaign as the price of a seat, or that many would have been defeated by others more artful in vote solicitation, if they had listed their names on a popular election ballot.

Modern government has become too vast and complex to permit a proliferation of popular elections for subordinate officers.

The essence of practical operation within the spirit of representative democracy is the election of the highest officials — such as the governor — and holding them responsible for the quality and the performance, or the lack thereof, of regents and hundreds of others.

Strictly Personal

A Symbol of Moral, Judicial Bankruptcy

BY SYDNEY J. HARRIS

What a depressing testimonial to man's immaturity. I am talking about the "Phys-Tester," demonstrated to newsmen in Chicago not long ago by the president of General Motors.

This electronic box, devised to be installed on the dashboards of all GM cars in the probable future, has been made to deter drunken drivers and other incompetents from starting their cars unless they can remember their private code and perform a "proficiency test" on the instrument.

This drastic measure is being innovated because statistics show that liquor is involved in more than half of all the 50,000 fatal car accidents in the U.S. each year. And no campaign thus far has been successful in persuading people not to take the wheel when under the influence of liquor.

There is absolutely nothing to be said in defense of mildly intoxicated driving. A car is a two-ton weapon even in sober hands; when the reflexes have been slowed and the vision impaired by booze, driving a car is like carrying a loaded rifle down a crowded street.

Every child knows this. But too many adults do not. Too many drive cars — both drunk and sober — precisely as if they were weapons. Every hate, every frustration, every twinge of inferiority or self-contempt, is projected onto other motorists and pedestrians. Sheer aggression has become the rule of the road.

Now we obviously require a piece of electronic machinery to control and restrain us. Nothing else seems to work. Pleas and warnings go unheeded; fines are not a deterrent; and judges are reluctant to impose jail sentences (even when fatalities are incurred) because the Great American Voter looks upon his automobile as an inviolable right to the pursuit of homicide.

Ironically, the same respectable citizens who so stridently demand "tougher penalties" for car-thieves, muggers and other violators of the law, are strangely silent on the subject of "cracking down" on driving offenses — even though motorists injure and kill a thousand times more innocent victims than all criminal elements put together.

The new "Phys-Tester" is an ugly symbol of our moral and judicial bankruptcy — and of our social hypocrisy as well. Criminals are not deterred by harsher penalties (that is their way of life), but ordinary citizens are. It is our reluctance to police ourselves that gives criminals the cynical courage to pierce our thin facade of "decency."

Agnew Has Reasons To Step Down in 1972

Rumors Could be Strategic but Spiro Would Rather Bow Out Than be Dropped by Nixon

BY ROWLAND EVANS AND ROBERT NOVAK

WASHINGTON — Increasing talk at high Republican levels that Vice President Spiro Agnew may bow out the 1972 Republican Presidential ticket has its source not among Agnew-haters but in the very bosom of the Vice President's political family.

Two of Agnew's long-time intimates—Stanley Blair, top Vice Presidential aide before he ran successfully for governor of Maryland, and Agnew fundraiser J. Walter Jones, a rich Baltimore businessman—have been dropping hints that Agnew may not want to be Vice President another term.

One theory for these obviously Agnew-inspired leaks is that Agnew may be trying to light a backfire against dump-Agnew campaigns by Republican liberals who regard him as a dangerous 1972 hazard. Thus, political speculation that Agnew is seriously considering not running is easily converted by the Vice President's passionate devotees into an apparent effort to undermine him. That, in turn, could become the catalyst for a massive counterattack by conservatives to force President Nixon to keep Agnew on the ticket.

Just such a counterattack under a bold "Agnew Must Stay" headline dominates page one of the June issue of Battle Line, the publication of the American Conservative Union whose chairman is M. Stanton Evans, editor of the Indianapolis News.

"The time has come to say what should not have to be said at all," proclaims Battle Line. "The dumping of Vice President Spiro Agnew from the 1972 Republican ticket would be unacceptable to American conservatives."

But there is reason to be skeptical about the theory that Agnew himself is trying to light a pro-Agnew backfire. That reason goes to the character and personality of Agnew himself, a unique figure in contemporary American politics who seldom plays by accepted political rules and who, having rocketed to the Vice Presidency from political obscurity in 1968, regards himself as something of a political accident.

Thus, at lunch with a friendly Republican Senator recently, Agnew emphasized what he says privately to his own staff: that he couldn't care less about another four years in the Vice Presidency. To this routine disclaimer, he often adds wistfully that he wants to make money while there is still time. He has been told that as a political commentator, wearing the mantle of what he has attacked as "the small and unelected elite" of the television media, he could gross up to half a million dollars a year.

In short, the prospect of the Republican party's most prolific fund-raiser in history becoming a fund-raiser for himself is taken seriously inside the Agnew camp.

But far more important to a possible Agnew withdrawal is new political intelligence that he would in fact be a liability, not an asset, on the Nixon 1972 ticket. Top party leaders are studying a Michigan poll, for example, which shows Agnew costing Mr. Nixon heavily in votes, not unexpected in a liberal state.

In Kansas, however, a Midwest Republican cradle, a recent Oliver Quayle poll shows a decline in Agnew's "favorable" rating from 58 per cent to 46 per cent between September 1970 and last month. The President dropped only from 66 to 59 per cent.

Even in large parts of the Dixie stronghold of Nixon Republicanism, where Agnew's name glitters, the President now outruns his Vice President. Party professionals interpret this as meaning one thing: that despite Agnew's singular popularity, Mr. Nixon has now built himself a political base solid enough to run well without Agnew. As one Deep South Republican chairman told us: "With Nixon as strong as he is, we might even sell a Nixon-Rockefeller ticket here. That fellow Rockefeller (New York Gov. Nelson Rockefeller) doesn't wear horns any longer."

Finally, Agnew himself is studying polls showing that the new youth vote—which will reach a potential 27 million by November 1972—may go Democratic as high as seven-to-one. Agnew correctly worries that his presence on the ticket would be no help there.

By quietly planting the seed now of a possible voluntary exit from the 1972 ticket, Agnew buys important psychological protection against an involuntary exit dictated by Mr. Nixon. If and when that time comes in a secret huddle between Messrs. Nixon and Agnew, the Vice President can emerge with the word that the decision to bow out was his, not the President's.

About Out of State Students

The National Association of State Universities and Land Grant Colleges has authorized a study of the policies and trends as to the enrollments of out of state students. Over two-thirds of the institutions have not found "it necessary or desirable to utilize quotas on the admission of non-residents," according to Robert Carbon, head of education of the University of Maryland.

Reasons for the admission of non-residents are both economic and philosophical — and so are the reasons used against it. Those who favor cite the higher tuition charges required of non-residents. They also point out that the diversity on the campus gained from having students from far off places is in itself an educational advantage and counters the parochialism that may afflict universities. Knowing more people of different economic, racial and geographic backgrounds is a part of the learning process and an aid in future employment and social living.

But since even out of state tuitions do not meet the actual costs of each student, it can easily be seen that state institutions which admit many out of state students are forcing the taxpayers of one state to subsidize the students of another state which may resist added taxes for education. This probably has been true as far as Wisconsin and Illinois are concerned at least in past years. Legislators in Wisconsin also have charged that a high proportion of student activists — or the ones most legislators don't like — come from other states and therefore add not only to the costs of higher education but to its problems of demonstrations, violence and dissent.

However, the influence of out of state students seems to be over-rated in both arguments. There is no attempt in Wisconsin or any public institution to seek students with different backgrounds. A student from Michigan, Illinois or Minnesota can hardly present a great difference of viewpoint from those in Wisconsin.

Similarly, blaming the radical nature of the Madison campus upon kids from New York or Berkeley isn't realistic. The trend on all campuses, as shown by a survey taken by National Review, is toward more liberal viewpoints all over the country and in a variety of institutions. It is likely that this always has been the case. University students are exposed to new ideas, are out from under parental authority and are on the verge at least of maturity with the defiance this state of affairs usually means for the past, tradition and conservative attitudes.

But one angle which the NASULGC survey does not emphasize is what appears to be a change in many states as far as antagonism to out of state students is concerned. The reason is those empty beds in all too many dormitories. Whether there was over-building in the past is no longer relevant. It is the "life style" of the students that has changed and they don't want to live in the dorms. Presumably with a larger percentage of out of state students a few more beds can be filled. And in the long run the economic viewpoint is apt to win over the philosophic one, especially in state legislatures.

South Vietnam Prepares for an Election

South Vietnam will hold national elections for President next fall and it is clear that President Nguyen Van Thieu plans to be a candidate and hopes to win this time with a solid majority. His hopes have been put into action in the National Assembly approval of qualifications for candidates.

The Assembly has approved the proposal that candidates must be nominated by at least 40 members of the Assembly or by 100 provincial and city councillors. On the surface this would not appear to be an outlandish requirement. Last time there were 11 candidates for the presidency and it was virtually impossible for anyone to receive much of a majority. Thieu, the winner, had only 35 per cent of the vote and this has made it difficult to rule. This is a situation similar to that in France some years ago when the plethora of political splinter parties made behind the scenes wheeling and dealing essential to election victory and to the passage of any legislation. Requirements of a certain amount of substance and support for political parties now are required in France and West Germany which also suffered for a time from the variety. To the Vietnamese, unused to free elections, the number of candidates and parties must have been particularly confusing.

However, the motives behind the Assembly action and the methods by which it was achieved are not encouraging as far as the matter of free elections is concerned. Thieu apparently was most interested in preventing his vice president, Nguyen Cao Ky, from being a candidate. Ky has announced his intentions of running. A one-time hard line hawk, he has modified his position, declared he is not for a military victory and seeks a political settlement. Nevertheless votes for him probably would come from those otherwise intended for Thieu.

The other likely major candidate is Duong Van Minh, the "Big Minh" who was head of the government during one of those short term regimes following President Diem's downfall. Duong has long been considered in favor of a negotiated settlement with the National Liberation Front although he was silent on the issue when in exile in Thailand, probably so that he might be permitted to return to Vietnam. Observers believe Minh will have little difficulty in fulfilling the new requirement for candidacy.

An opposition newspaper in Saigon, still open despite some government crackdowns on the dissident press, stated that the average price per vote in the Assembly on the nomination issue had doubled in the last month to $2,544. The inference is that President Thieu and his backers paid for the favorable vote. This is hardly anything new in any politics and especially so in Asian politics. But it once more gives the lie to the official American position that the government in Saigon is a miniature American democratic regime and the kind of fine leadership that 45,000 Americans have died for.

Actually honest elections between Thieu and Minh could reveal how the South Vietnamese feel about the war and the way domestic affairs were being handled far better than a presidential race with a large number of candidates. Also, the Vietnamese should be permitted to handle things in their own ways even if that means graft, vote buying and even intimidation. But United States officials should beware of endorsing the means and the results. Such commendation demonstrates either our ignorance or our lack of integrity.

Philaletheans Hold Exhibition

100 YEARS AGO
Quoted from the Appleton Crescent for June 17, 1871.

The annual exhibition of the Philalethean Society, Lawrence University, took place at the Chapel on Friday evening last, June 9th.

The Chapel was well filled, and at about 9 o'clock, the exercises commenced with the singing of a duet and chorus in the number entitled, "Shall We Know Each Other in Heaven?" The singing merited all the applause given.

Prayer was then offered by the Rev. Mr. Fallows, after which we listened to a beautiful piece, "Beautiful Friend."

The Salutatory was delivered by Mr. John Leith, of Center. His piece was well written and, with the exception of the first part, was well delivered. He certainly has great determination and ambition.

The oration "Judge Not," delivered by Mr. M. S. Rice, of Fort Atkinson, was well expressed in thought and logical, but, although the delivery was good, it lacked spirit.

The Poem by Mr. W. W. Kimball, of Clinton, was decidedly good; still, the speaker could have delivered it with more animation.

The exercises closed with an Oration by Mr. B. B. Dunstan, on the subject, "We Still Live." The speaker handled his subject in an able manner, and gave ample evidence of being a good student and possessing more than average ability.

Monday, June 10, 1846.

Mrs. F. S. Loss, New London, was elected a state director of the Wisconsin Federation of Business and Professional Women's Clubs at Lake Delton during the weekend. The New London woman also was chosen editor of the publication, The Wisconsin Businesswoman. The meeting was the state group's first postwar convention.

Four Appleton High Students were to go to Badger Girls State in Madison that week. They were Hester Wolfe, Viola Trautmann, Dolores Kools and Marian Brewer. Miss Betty Greb, Neenah, former governor of Badger Girls State, was to be a counsellor.

Mrs. John Sealy was to speak at the last meeting of the year of the Mothers Club of First Methodist Church, Appleton. Mrs. Paul Clary was to present readings, Mrs. Earl Miller was to lead the devotions and Mrs. John Hertzberg was to present the music.

In Retrospect—

Humphrey Sees 1968 Loss as Possibly 'Best for Everyone'

BY KEVIN P. PHILLIPS

WASHINGTON — It is a measure of the bias and blindness of the New Left that even the greatest wisdom will be spurned when it comes from the mouth of Hubert H. Humphrey.

For example, the Minnesota Senator observed that his defeat in 1968 "may have been the best thing for everyone" because "the country wanted a change — of party, of administration, and of personality."

Normally, The New Republic is one of the saner left-liberal journals, but its editors howled with printed indignation in the June 12 issue at HHH's view of the American system as a kind of two-car garage. "Tired of the Chevy?" the editors mocked, then "take the Ford. You'll get about the same gas mileage, breakdowns, repair service, but it's a change and good for you."

Well, The New Republic is admittedly witty. Mr. Humphrey is ahead on perspicacity, though. Suppose that the Nixon Presidential campaign had been just a little more inept, just a little more artificial, and HHH had eked out a paper-thin victory in 1968. Where would everybody be now?

The probable answer is not at all elusive. Let us begin with the Democrats, who would be in trouble. Big trouble. It would not have been easy for Hubert Humphrey to wind down — and admit the failure of — the Vietnamese War he so enthusiastically joined Lyndon Johnson in promoting. As of 1971, the Humphrey administration in all likelihood, would be wearing seven years of war — and Democratic war management — around its neck like an albatross. There would be fury on the left, and blood in the streets.

Then there's the economy. The Democrats might have issue among Republicans because the public attitude (and party opportunity) would be compelling.

The Democratic administration, on the other hand, would not be fearfully contemplating a massive "Dump the Hump" series of primary fights, a threatened third party and maybe a combination of the two, Humphrey's prospects for November, 1972, would be bleak indeed. Left-liberals of The New Republic stripe would doubtless be leading anti-Humphrey or third party efforts, but all of this would simply be a prelude to the inevitable conservative 1972 triumph.

Thus, The New Republic notwithstanding, Mr. Humphrey is quite obviously right in assessing his defeat as the "best thing" for the Democratic Party, liberals and the Left in general.

The Nixon administration, in turn, has done very little with the opportunity given to it in 1968. It has taken 2½ years to neither win nor terminate the most unpopular war in American history, and one that was begun by the opposition. Nixon economic policies have been generally mediocre. The administration has aborted the vital Republican issues of welfare and social planning, and has actually taken the monkeys of bigger welfare, union racial quotas, and school busing off the backs of the Democrats and accepted them itself. Important groups like farmers, aerospace workers, and hardhats have been alienated. Because of this, the liberal Democrats have a real chance to get back in the White House in 1972.

It is not The New Republic that should be lamenting Humphrey's political gratification in 1968 defeat. It is National Review, Battle Line and Human Events that should be speculating, in light of the 1969-1971 record, whether or not American conservatives might not be better off without the Nixon administration, but hurtling toward genuine 1972 victory.

Wisconsin Report

David Carley Could Have Been Model for Schulberg's Novel

BY JOHN WYNGAARD

Post-Crescent Madison Bureau

MADISON — A bystander in the arena of state politics may regret that Budd Schulberg chose for his delightful novel of about two decades ago a title in question form: "What Makes Sammy Run?"

It would have been a magnificently apt name for the eventual biography of

Wyngaard

David Carley, Gov. Lucey's first nominee to the University of Wisconsin Board of Regents.

Like the fictional prototype, Carley has almost incredible energy, ambition, and confidence, and a serene conviction that there is nothing to which he turns his attention that he cannot manage successfully.

There are those who can restrain their enthusiasm about his qualities and his restless search for opportunities in the limelight. But there are few of his acquaintances who in the inner privacy of their minds refuse to acknowledge that the young man has an extraordinary capacity for work, that he is one of the most articulate young politicians who has turned up in Wisconsin lately, or that he is capable of managing the diversity of activities in which he engages, sometimes an astonishing number of them simultaneously.

The Fast Runner

Carley is now 42. Since he turned up in Wisconsin less than two decades ago (from Kalamazoo, Mich.) he has engaged in a series of enterprises of such variety as to represent a life career for men of more modest aspiration.

His first public notice came when he was one of the minor staffers of the Wisconsin State Chamber of Commerce, an implausible career beginning for the man who soon thereafter emerged as an aggressive spokesman for liberal causes. For any other man, the leap from the environment of the Chamber's legislative counseling service to rank in the administration of Gov. Gaylord Nelson, the second Democratic state executive of this century, would have appeared improbable, even incredible.

But Carley managed with the aplomb that one tends to expect in the Celtic strains rather than Scandinavian. Within months he was the most publicized subordinate in the Nelson administration, which established the Democratic party of the state.

Received Doctor's Degree

Characteristically, Carley pursued his academic ambitions and within a respectable period — remembering the enervating number of his other enterprises — was awarded a doctorate by the school that he will soon help to rule.

His doctoral dissertation explored the role of the governor in Wisconsin government and politics, a telltale choice by a student who a few years later resolved that he would become governor. His first attempt failed. But it is not difficult to discern that for him the ambition to be the first citizen of his state, as to others, is impossible to put aside once it is permitted to flower.

Carley turned his attention to making a fortune. By all appearances, he has succeeded brilliantly. Madison spawns new rumors each day about the extent of his wealth accumulated after only a few years as a promoter of public facilities, mostly involving public financing.

When they collided as rivals for a place in the new Democratic party, Carley and Pat Lucey were unusually hostile antagonists. But both men are also supreme pragmatists. Last year Lucey knew he needed special help in Dane County. Carley was contentedly building his fortune. But he wanted a foothold in top-side politics, nevertheless, against a future time.

They struck a bargain. He became the Lucey manager. Lucey ran well in Dane County — although he probably could have done so in a "Democratic year" in any event. Notwithstanding, Carley had a due bill.

What does a governor give "the man who has everything?" There was never much doubt. A seat on the U. W. regents is the most prestigious, the most desirable of possible patronage for the man who doesn't want to be on the payroll. For Carley it will also be a forum, as legitimate as it is invaluable, against that day when Lucey retires and his gubernatorial hunger returns.

Strictly Personal

A Realist Foolishly Sees 'Natural Color'

BY SYDNEY J. HARRIS

Everybody looks at the world through colored glasses. Nobody is able to look at it through a "clear pane," because each temperament and personality colors its vision and calls this color "the real world."

Some look through rose-colored glasses, others through darker hues. Some see the world in a bilious tone, others in muted shades of gray, and still others in dramatic scarlets, or pale yellow.

The "realist," therefore is not one who foolishly imagines that he alone sees the world in its "true" or "natural" color, without the distortion of spectacles — rather, it is the one who recognizes the particular coloration of his personality, and discounts it in his estimate of "reality."

Even modern science has become increasingly modest in its view of external objects. It is beginning to learn that "subjectivity" is impossible to escape in scientific research and investigation; the very process of human examination itself disturbs the "realness" of the object being inspected or measured or photographed.

This is why we have only "mathematical models" of the elements in dubatonic physics, and not "pictures" of these particles at work.

Fishing Is Good

DUBLIN (AP) — The Irish Republic recorded its best fishing year in history in 1970. The catch was valued at nearly $100 million, 31 per cent more than in 1969.

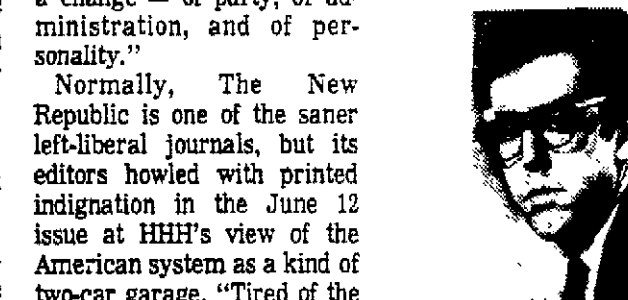

Predictions and projections about "what is going to happen" in the next few years depend as much upon the temperament of the predictor as upon the philosophy or history or ideology he espouses.

Two seers can take the same set of facts and interpret them quite differently — one using them to see nothing but chaos and destruction ahead, the other using them as a basis for hope of progress and reconciliation in the conflicts of man.

And their philosophies, while pretending to be rooted in fact or theory, are little more than extrapolations of their individual temperaments — rosy, black, or some shade in between. Every idea they touch is colored by the "glasses" they inevitably wear.

But while scientists have learned to allow for the "personal equation," most thinkers have not. And we ourselves gravitate to those thinkers (or soothsayers) who most closely approximate our own temperaments, because we find their ideas congenial, and not because we have made any objective evaluation of them.

Indeed, it is impossible to make any objective evaluation of the future, for it is precisely the "invariables" in history that determine events. The most honest thing we can do is to discount at least 50 per cent of what we "believe" as being in the service of both our self-interest and the particular shade of glasses we were born with.

achieved a little less unemployment (perhaps even more, if the troops had been brought home faster and earlier). On the other hand, inflation would surely be worse. Blue-collar and lower-middle-class voters would be itching to repudiate Johnson-Humphrey economics at the polls in 1972.

How about welfare? The welfare explosion would be another millstone around Humphrey's neck, with a GOP-Southern Democratic coalition in Congress whipping up a national crusade for a hard-nosed crackdown.

Southern school desegregation — and especially the new busing demands — would have obliterated the last remnants of white Southern support for the national Democratic Party. Republican orators would be riding the issue like a fire engine. Suburban housing integration? Same thing.

Right now, the GOP would be mobilizing for 1972 with the scent of victory overpowering in its nostrils. The likely nominee would not be Richard Nixon — by this point a thrice-defeated, scorned exile — but some stauncher conservative firmly dedicated to pre-Nixon GOP approaches to welfare, social planning, and defense. The Vietnamese War would probably not be too divisive an

Police & Fire Beat

Outagamie County sheriff's incident occurred about one-fifth of a mile north of Emery Lane. Authorities are investigating a rescue squad call in Oneida.

The Brown County rescue squad was called out at 5 p.m. Sunday to aid Ed Sherrard, Jr., 18, Fish Creek Rd., Oneida. Sherrard was found with a broken left foot and taken to a Green Bay hospital.

Investigation is being carried out to determine the incidents surrounding the accident.

BEAR CREEK — A two car collision at 3:20 a.m., Sunday, resulted in injuries to two passengers in one of the autos.

According to Outagamie County traffic officials, an auto driven by Daniel C. Olson, 19, 90 West St., Clintonville, was parked along the edge of County Trunk D, when it was struck in the rear by an auto driven by David C. Smith, 30, route 2, Marion.

Carol Reissmann, 20, 20 West St., and Helen Winford, 43, route 1, both passengers in the Olson auto, sustained back injuries, and were taken to Clintonville Community Hospital by the Clintonville rescue squad.

A third passenger in the Olson auto was not injured.

SEYMOUR — Jerome J. Hermus, 19, route 3, Seymour escaped with a cut hand when his auto left the road on State 54, near the State 55 intersection, struck the shoulder, crossed the highway, and entered the north ditch, striking a stop sign and culvert.

The 1963 model auto was considered a total loss. The Outagamie County sheriff's department investigated the accident.

KAUKAUNA — Robert P. Beach, 23, route 1, Menasha, sustained cuts and bruises and was taken by ambulance to Kaukauna hospital as the result of a one car accident Saturday night.

According to Outagamie County sheriff's officials, Beach was traveling north on Maloney Road, at about 10:40 p.m., failed to make a corner and struck three trees and a power pole.

Damage to Beach's 1963 auto covered the entire vehicle. The Fire Victims Give Thanks To Community

HORTONVILLE — A rural Hortonville family whose home was extensively damaged by fire June 2 has expressed gratitude to the people of Appleton and the area for donating clothing and other goods after the tragedy.

Mr. and Mrs. Jack Thyssen and their five children lost all of their belongings in the fire which is believed to have started from an overheated incinerator.

In a letter Mr. and Mrs. Thyssen said, "It is truly wonderful the efforts you all have shown us at this time. Without your standing behind us lending your help, this cross might have been unbearable. 'Thanks' is a small way to repay you, but it's sent from the bottom of our hearts."

The Outagamie County Red Cross also assisted the family.

The Thyssens are living in a mobile home on their farm. Thyssen was injured in a farm accident last year and has undergone several operations. He has been unable to work for the past several months.

William Jahl, 1218 Washington St., Little Chute, reported to Appleton police that his auto was vandalized sometime Sunday night or early Monday morning.

Jahl stated that he had parked the auto in a parking lot on W. Wisconsin Avenue Sunday night. When he returned to the auto early Monday morning four tires were flat, the antenna broken off, and all of the spark plug wires pulled out.

ONEIDA — Outagamie County sheriff's officials are investigating a break in at an Oneida tavern operated by Carol Nicholas, route 1, Oneida.

It is presently not in operation and was being cleaned in preparation for its opening.

Entry was gained through a window in one of the restrooms. The burglars crossed into a laundromat in the same building and removed a coin changer. They took the changer into the basement of the tavern, where they broke it open.

A cigarette machine in the tavern was also opened and about 10 packs of cigarettes taken. Damage to the two machines is estimated at about $175. The incident was reported Monday evening.

KAUKAUNA — Joseph Nielsen, 108 Brothers St., reported to police theft of $10 from his home while the family was away sometime between 9:30 a.m. and 4:30 p.m. Saturday. According to the owner, entry into the home may have been gained through a partially open window.

The theft of about $49 worth of clothing from a washer at the Sundial Laundromat, N. Meade St., sometime Saturday, was reported to Appleton police Monday.

Gateway Files Suit Kroger to Sell 32 Wisconsin Stores

MADISON, Wis. (AP) — The en the opportunity to buy them, he said.

Reinhart claims he was told June 2 that Kroger "intends and was about to begin selling the 32 stores to other parties." On June 9, he said, he was informed in the Kroger office at Butler, Wis., that the retailer planned to sell the stores to the first acceptable bidder regardless of the prior agreement with Gateway.

Enlarging Warehouses
Gateway's estimated $4 million damage suit stems from the wholesaler's claim that it spent more than $1 million enlarging its warehouses to handle the Kroger business, increased its inventories between $1 and $2 million for the same purpose, and would sustain losses of at least $2 million if denied the right to purchase.

Kroger Division Manager Mel Schulenburg said Monday the firm is negotiating for sale of the 32 Wisconsin stores outside the Milwaukee area.

Schulenburg would not comment on the suit by Gateway or on the extent of the negotiations now going on.

Excessive Losses
Gateway has been supplying the statewide Kroger chain for about a year and claims that it will sustain at least $4 million in damages if Kroger is not restrained.

The La Crosse firm said it signed a written agreement with Kroger last year to supply the retail stores with various items through July 13, 1973.

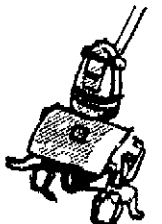

Gateway President D. B. Reinhart said in a filed affidavit that under the terms of the agreement Kroger was to notify the wholesale firm of its intent to sell any of the 32 Wisconsin stores. Gateway was to be given

Navy Scuttles Bell-Bottoms

WASHINGTON (AP) — Bell-bottomed pants, jumper tops and soft white hats, a Navy tradition since the American revolution, will be replaced by a single uniform for sailors from seamen to admirals, the Navy said by July, 1975, the dress uniform for all officers and enlisted men will be double-breasted dark blue jacket, black tie and white officer-type matching pants, white shirt, cap with bill.

Admiral Elmo R. Zumwalt Jr., chief of Naval operations, announced Monday.

Also out for the enlisted men are the bell-bottomed dungarees.

That uniform will be replaced by a blue work uniform with a jumper-style shirt and straight-leg trousers.

Zipper Front

And, for the first time, the uniforms will be zippered fronts instead of button-up fly weight service dress blue uniform. Tropical Khaki and white uniforms will be retained.

Zumwalt said the new uniforms will be issued to recruits in July, 1973. The uniforms will be mandatory for all Navy men by July 1, 1975.

Pool Ruling 3rd Against Blacks

By BARRY SCHWEID Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Supreme Court decision allowing the closing of public swimming pools in Jackson, Miss., was the third major setback for Negroes in the court in less than two weeks.

Justice Hugo L. Black, author of the majority opinion in the 5-4 decision, went out of his way Monday to caution from the bench that it does not signal approval of "any subterfuge" aimed at weakening school integration. Still, this month, the court has declared apportionment plans fashioned by federal judges are outside the reach of the 1965 and 1970 voting rights law, that inner-city blacks do not have a right to their own legislative districts and now that Jackson could close its pools to avoid integrating them.

William M. Kunstler, the New York lawyer who had argued before the court the pool closings were "a badge of slavery," described the ruling as "unspeakably tragic" and "proof that black slavery is dead in name only."

Earlier this term the Supreme Court unanimously approved mass busing of public school children to accomplish desegregation and banned job tests that locked blacks into lesser jobs without proving they were disqualified for advancement.

These rulings, Kunstler said in an interview, were in a "meaningless area."

"To blacks," he said, "being kept out of city pools is telling them they are beings of an inferior order. The Supreme Court has given a message to black people that says 'you are slaves.'"

The Rev. Ralph David Abernathy, president of the Southern Christian Leadership Conference, said "The Supreme Court today made, in my opinion, an illogical and dangerous decision."

He said "racism is clearly the sole reason for closing the pools in Jackson . . . Official racism has, in effect, been upheld today by a five-man majority of the U.S. Supreme Court."

Tobias Simon, a civil rights lawyer in Miami, said he was "aghast at the decision."

"The court is proceeding to confirm the start of the fast-paced economic expansion sought by the Nixon administration," he said.

The council maintains the industrial production figures shed more light on how well industry is producing, or output per man-hour of workers, instead of the total produced.

After Strike

The May rise in the index matched the January increase, when output rose sharply because General Motors resumed production after a strike.

Except for January, the May increase was the sharpest since June 1969, when the economy was booming along. Then it reached 171.5 per cent of the Industrial Production Boost Taken Calmly

WASHINGTON (AP) — The 1957-59 average. The new figure is 4.2 per cent below that.

During the early part of the year, industrial production advanced sluggishly, indicating the economy had failed to respond as snappily as President Nixon wanted. But the May jump indicated the pace has picked up.

Even if the President's economic advisers weren't gleeful over the rise, the Treasury Department found some happiness in the index.

Economic Recovery

"I think it's very encouraging," said Assistant Treasury Secretary Murray Weidenbaum. "It certainly confirms the recovery in the economy is under way."

The index, measuring output of the nation's factories, mines and utilities, showed sharp gains in the production of iron and steel, indicating some stockpiling in the steel industry in advance of a possible strike later this year.

Automobile production also showed another big rise, advancing by 5 per cent over April and reaching an annual rate of 8.5 million units.

Output of consumer goods and materials continued to advance. And production of business and defense equipment leveled off after earlier declines.

10 to 20 Cents a Pound Flat Rate Fine Considered for Sulfur Emission

WASHINGTON (AP) — A Segall said U.S. industry has reacted with "outright hostility" to any suggestion of sulfur-emission fines and many difficulties lie ahead in working out an equitable formula against violators.

Coal Association

In a keynote address earlier, Carl E. Bagge, president of the coal association and former chairman of the Federal Power Commission, opposed the administration's proposed pollution fine.

"To put a tax on sulfur emissions at a time when proven sulfur-emission technology is years away from fruition is nothing less than punitive," Bagge said.

Paper Shuffling

President Nixon advanced the concept of sulfur-emission fines in a recent message to Congress. Nixon said the Treasury Department should study the feasibility of his proposal and hammer out the detailed penalty and enforcement procedures.

A coal association executive said that in discussions with Segall it was understood the Tennessee Valley Authority also would be subject to the 10-cent-per-pound sulfur-emission penalty.

"That seems to me to be paper shuffling," the coal spokesman said.

The government-operated TVA is this nation's largest user of coal. One of its chief functions is to produce low-cost electricity.

As it is burned, coal is the No. 1 source of sulfur in the air. Some poorer grades of oil also produce sulfur emission.

MADISON — A reasonably priced public university campus in every backyard, would apparently be the ideal arrangement for many Wisconsin residents.

The conclusion is the result of a public attitude survey made in May by Market Opinion Research of Detroit for the University of Wisconsin Board of Regents. The survey suggested by Regent Ody Fish, and funded personally, for a report $12,000 on regents president Bernard Ziegler, was intended to probe opinion about the proposed merger of the two public university systems and attitudes about public higher education in the state.

The results on questions about the merger were so wishy-washy as to provide little or no help to the board members in deciding whether to favor the governor's plan. The public was split about evenly for and against, and according to the poll taker, both proponents and opponents were generally ambivalent about the subject.

But the information about the public attitude towards higher education was for more instructive, although as Robert Teeter of Market Opinion Research told the board, hardly surprising or shocking.

Tax Supported

In general, those questioned, who were a statistically accurate cross section of the adult Wisconsin population believe the high tax support of higher education has been justified, the two systems are as good as, or better than public universities in other states, and they would choose a public university campus for their children to attend.

In selecting a school for their youngsters nearly half the respondents cited the curriculum that would meet their child's needs as first priority. But, after narrowing the field to those schools offering his chosen major, the critical factors cited by those who named either the University of Wisconsin or Wisconsin State Universities were located near home and cost.

Cost came in second, with the high academic standing of the UW third for those selecting the UW. For the WSU partisans cost was third with the relatively smaller size ranked second. Cost was mentioned as a first priority by one quarter of the sample respondents.

For respondents in a region including Appleton, Shawano and Wausau, location near home was cited as a major concern as measured on an intensity scale while the general public considered cost only of average importance the pollsters reported.

Location Emphasized

The great emphasis on location, and preference for schools close to home for their children is supported by another report released recently by the Coordinating Council for Higher Education. The ranking of cost high on the list of factors considered in selecting a school corresponds to the response on another campus question about the tuition at the public universities. Nearly three-quarters of the respondents said they thought the tuition in both Wisconsin is less favorable now than it was two years ago.

A history of disorders was of much greater importance to adults living in the Madison area than in other parts of the state. Further, persons living in the Madison area were the only ones who ranked a non-local or distant school as first choice for their children rather than the nearby UW Madison campus.

In stating preferences for one system or another, the respondents named the two public university systems in a proportion nearly matching actual enrollments. Forty percent named the WSU system as preferable and 30 percent chose the UW with smaller numbers of out-of-state institutions. In comparison, the 1970 enrollment for the WSU system was about 60,000 and about 54,000 for the UW system.

When asked to name specific campuses, the order of respondents' choices was similar to the rank order of size of public universities giving the same validity to the results.

The choice of one system over another indicated, Teeter reported, that there is an intense loyalty of partisans to each system. Those with ties to one or the other most often chose the two systems and generally said they did approve that system for their children. When asked to compare and rate the two systems, respondents gave the University of Wisconsin highest ratings for producing research, offering comprehensive academic programs, extra-curricular activities, academic reputation and offering education to minority groups. The state universities were rated significantly higher for administration and handling of student problems, and slightly higher for the quality of teaching and preparation of students for jobs. The only identical rating for both systems was for the academic ability of students.

Having distinguished between his work or not while 55 percent of the respondents did not know whether they approved of each system, despite loyalty to one or the other, the respondents further supported the concept of unique campuses each with a different specialty by a 78 percent margin.

Told of several recent changes at the University of Wisconsin the respondents gave a three-quarters vote of approval of the board of regents in funding the school. But the major change, the installation of John Weaver as president drew the largest "don't know" of the survey. Thirty-seven percent of the respondents did not know whether they approved of the change.

Doctor Is Cautious About Use of Mercury

BY G. C. THOSTESON, M.D.

Dear Dr. Thosteson: Is there any harm in using a hand cream that contains 1 per cent ammoniated mercury? — Mrs. D.H.

I don't think I should try to be an oracle on this; I don't know — and don't know that anyone else is able to say — how much danger, if any, is added by such creams.

Some mercury is absorbed by the skin, but how much is a question. When the creams contain from 1 to 3 per cent to start with.

Ammoniated mercury has been used for ages in ointments without any harm being reported. But since we evidently are getting mercury from other sources, the question is whether the small amounts added from hand creams implies adding up to dangerous totals.

My present feeling is that such medicated creams or ointments might best be used only when prescribed for treatment of specific skin conditions. For general use, there are hand creams that do not contain mercury.

Let me add that I haven't heard of any harm coming from the amount of mercury absorbed from such ointments, but I'm inclined to be cautious.

Dear Dr. Thosteson: I would

like to know about emphysema of the lungs. Is it caused only by smoking? Is it fatal? Can it be cured? Is there any treatment for it? — S. T.

It is caused by things other than smoking, but smoking is very bad for it, as are smog and industrial fumes, although at times there may be no apparent cause. Yes, it is a disease that can be fatal, and cured, but it can be treated to make it less disabling. I have a booklet on it, called "How to Control Emphysema." Send 20 cents in coin and a self-addressed, stamped envelope to me, in care of The Post-Crescent, for a copy.

Dear Dr. Thosteson: Please explain Alzheimer's disease, cause and cure. — C. W.

I'm sorry but I don't have very good news for you. The cause is not known, but it is a form of presenile dementia that occurs about the age of 40 or 50. There may be a hereditary factor.

The brain starts to atrophy, or shrivel. This can lead to paralysis, convulsions, loss of speech, memory loss. The patient eventually becomes bed-ridden from the progressive deterioration. There is no cure.

It gives me no pleasure to give bad news but, with such a diagnosis, you should be prepared for the situation.

Dear Dr. Thosteson: I have a lot of faith in you and I need an answer as soon as possible. My husband is only 33 and for the last five or six months has had a burning sensation after urinating. Now it is worse, and he has some discharge, in small amounts.

He is worried sick but afraid to go to a doctor. He is very stubborn and swears it's his prostate. Where he got this idea, I don't know, but he said if it was his prostate it's the end of our sexual relations for good. Is this true? —D. M.

Well, I'm willing to have a lot of faith in you, too. Just tell your husband in plain language that he obviously has a urinary tract infection of some sort, and you'd rather not take a chance on getting it from him. So he'd better get to the doctor for some treatment.

It may or may not involve his prostate gland. It doesn't sound particularly like it, but the discharge indicates infection somewhere, probably in the bladder or urethra.

Prostate infection does not automatically mean an end of sexual activity, but if you ignore an infection long enough, it can.

10th of Housing Starts Involve Second Homes

BY SYLVIA PORTER

An estimated more than one in 10 of 1971's housing starts will be for second homes — an astounding ratio which could push the total for second homes be used as a vacation residence and when rented out part-time, qualify for income tax deductibility.

Second homes also are directly in line with the long-term trend in the U.S. to at least two of everything (cars, TV sets, jobs, paychecks) and they reflect enormously powerful forces.

Vacation Savings

One obvious force behind the second home surge is our ever expanding amount of leisure time alongside our yearning to escape from our congested cities and suburbs. On average, we now have more leisure hours in our lifetime, three, four and five week vacations are spreading steadily; under the Monday holiday law, we have a mini-mum of five three-day week-ends a year and these "mini-investment appreciation, may vacations" will increase too.

A second factor is the huge home or a maximum loan savings on family vacations amounting the lender is willing, you'll over the long run. The hotel, motel restaurant costs for a second home loan over as long as a family of four or five on a span as 30 years You could, in fact, get full FHA backing for the purchase of a vacation house costing as much as $24,000—with a down payment of only $6,000.

And fifth, behind this vacation home boom is the boom in boating, which spawns a multi-plication of marinas, lakeshore developments, yachting clubs and more on-shore second homes too. Or the boom is the Federal Housing Admin-istration will insure mortgages on second homes. Assuming that you can find a willing lender in this period of renewed tightness in money and renewed rise in interest rates, you can get an FHA loan for up to 75 per cent of the appraised value of the

Ban Against Fat Labeling Is Removed

WASHINGTON (AP) — Under pressure from housewives and doctors the Food and Drug Administration has moved to drop its 12-year prohibition against disclosure of fat content on food labels.

The proposed regulation dis-allowed endorsing the still-disputed view that saturated fats, found mainly in meats and dairy products, contribute to heart and circulatory disease.

"The purpose of the proposed fat-labeling regulation is to help consumers identify the amount, source and type of fat in the foods they buy," said Dr. Charles C. Edwards, FDA commissioner. "We are not recommending changes in American dietary habits."

At present, fats and oils are usually listed only as shortening, meaning animal fat, and vegetable oil, meaning vegeta-ble fat.

The FDA cited pressure from consumers and doctors concerned about a possible link between fat intake and heart disease. However, the agency avoided endorsing the still-disputed view that saturated fats, found mainly in meats and dairy products, contribute to heart and circulatory disease.

The proposed regulation is to help consumers identify the amount, source and type of fat in the foods they buy," said Dr. Charles C. Edwards, FDA commissioner. "We are not recommending changes in American dietary habits."

A Sentimental Weekend for LU Alumni

Golden Alumni, those who graduated from Lawrence University 50 years ago, were honored at a reception at the home of President and Mrs. Thomas S. Smith. Bridging the years with conversation are Miss Jean MacFarlane, Oshkosh; Miss Eunice Shumway, Batavia, Ill.; Mrs. Carl Sherry, Appleton, and Mrs. Ralph Olmstead, Rockford, Ill.

Mrs. Elmer Herold, Potosi, stops during an informal luncheon at Memorial Union to greet Mrs. Don Kletziem, Minoqua; Mrs. Alden Johnston and Gerald Galpin. At right, Mrs. Smith shakes hands with Mrs. Carl Neidhold, Appleton, as the Rev. Arno Wallschlaeger, Lansing, Mich., looks on. The occasion was a reception for golden alumni at the Smith home.

It was a sentimental commencement for returning alumni and long-time members of the Lawrence community.

For Mrs. Norman Grimm, Evanston, Ill., and member of the class of '19, it was an opportunity to greet fellow classmates and indulge herself in grandmotherly pride. Granddaughter Judy Peterson of Milwaukee was one of the 282 seniors receiving diplomas Saturday evening.

For the Rev. Arno Wallschlaeger, Lansing, Mich., it was a moment in which 50 years were bridged as he stood before his classmates to receive a screen print of Main Hall by artist-in-Residence Thomas Dietrich from Alumni Secretary Alice Smith at the class of '21 dinner in Downer Center.

For Mr. and Mrs. Douglas Knight and the members of the Lawrence community, it was an opportunity to share again a friendship and association which began during Knight's presidential administration from 1954-63. After addressing the seniors, faculty and guests from the platform during the commencement exercises, he and his wife, Grace, slipped away to greet his former colleagues at the home of Dr. and Mrs. Vernon Roelofs.

The Knights had an opportunity of greeting old friends Sunday at a coffee at the home of his former secretary, Miss Helen Proctor; at a luncheon given by emeritus trustee Elmer Jennings; on a afternoon cruise aboard S.F. Shattuck's Pilgrim, and at an evening gathering at the home of Board of Trustee Chairman and Mrs. Arthur Remley.

President and Mrs. Thomas S. Smith entertained approximately 70 alumni at a buffet supper Friday evening in their home. After the supper, the Smiths accompanied their guests to the traditional commencement concert in the Chapel.

Alumni gathered for a brunch Saturday morning in Coleman Hall with Dr. Smith and Alumni Director Lynn Eilefson. The changes to the campus during the past 50 years were depicted in a slide lecture by William Robertson and the university today was described by Richard N. Bova, vice president of development and external affairs, at a 1 p.m. program in Youngchild Hall of Science.

Mr. and Mrs. Chriss Larsen welcomed the members of the class of '21 and preceding classes at a reception and dinner Saturday evening in Downer center. Members of the class of '21 were seated in a special section of the commencement ceremony.

Seniors and their parents were treated to a round of social events on Saturday. After rehearsing for the commencement ceremony in the morning, the seniors joined their parents at a picnic in Pierce Park. At 2 p.m. they were received by President and Mrs. Smith at a lawn party at their home. After the 8 p.m. commencement ceremony, the seniors gathered for a party and dance in the Memorial Union.

Honored guests, including the Knights; economist; Carl Kaysen and psychiatrist, Robert J. Lifton, honorary degree recipients, and Florence Otto and Norman Clapp, alumni distinguished service awardees, were guests at a dinner preceding the commencement ceremony Saturday at the home of President and Mrs. Smith.

Alumni, those of over 50 years and those of less than 12 hours, joined together at a brunch Sunday morning in Downer Center. Cars were packed and farewells were said. As the last notes of the carillon concert presented by Susan Dean, Swansea, Mass., faded away across the tree-tops, the campus settled into the quiet of summer.

The Guest Book at the Smith home holds many more names today than it did last week as a result of alumni returning for a sentimental weekend at their alma mater. Above, President Smith watches as Mrs. William Erdmann and Mrs. Hugh Lewis, both of Milwaukee, and Mrs. Wilder Spalding, Washington, D.C., sign in. At left, brunch Saturday in Coleman Hall saw Mr. and Mrs. E. J. Born and Mr. and Mrs. Joshua Wilson of Racine sharing the same table.

Below, Graduating seniors and their parents gathered at Pierce Park for a noontime picnic Saturday.

No longer will the letters be addressed to Libby Ernest, 1423 N. Union St., Appleton. They'll read Mrs. James Wolski, Milwaukee.

For Beth Weckerle of San Juan, Puerto Rico, there will be many an envelope finding its crumpled way to the waste basket due to change of name, change of address.

A friendship which began on paper for these two girls 10 years ago reached a climax Thursday as the Edward Ernest family stood looking out an airport window at Milwaukee's Mitchell Field as they waited for Beth, a long distance friend, a face in the crowd recognized.

The occasion of this first face-to-face encounter was Libby's Saturday wedding at Memorial Presbyterian Church when the dark-eyed Puerto Rican 19-year-old bound their ties as maid of honor.

The friendship began when Libby, then nine-years old, found a list of pen pal names in "American Girl" magazine, a Girl Scout publication. Like her peers she selected a name and wrote a letter. But the return had not been her original choice. Her first choice was inundated by mail, so Libby's response was transferred to Beth, who was not even on the pen pal list.

Their 10-year correspondence began with childish multicolored scrawls and a conversation to match. What ensued was stacks of envelopes, "T. P." and "long scrolies" asking, where do you go to school? How many brothers and sisters do you have? What kind of house do you live in?

"She sent me a picture of George Washington and San Juan's mayor," laughed Beth. But for the most part, the letters were "more newsy than a cultural exchange."

As the faceless friendship continued, it deepened. Said Beth, "Lots of times when I was depressed I wrote her. It was like talking to a friend."

"It just took a little bit of time to get consolation," Libby jibed. During college their relationship grew closer "because we shared the same experiences."

A year ago the question was posed, "Dear Beth. Will you be my maid of honor for my June 12, 1971 wedding?"

The immediate answer was "yes." Thursday Beth packed herself up and came straight from the University of Florida where she is a journalism major.

That night Beth tried on her floor-length maxi flowered gown, hand sewn by Mrs. Ernest and friends for the occasion. A perfect fit, all it needed was hemming. Then came the opening of bridal gifts, a night out for pizza and beer and hours of talking before being hushed to bed "after the volume had built."

The wedding was a "people affair" as friends lent a hand, mixing ingredients for finger sandwiches in the Ernest kitchen, sewing their way through a wedding gown and bridesmaid attire and putting the finishing touches to the yellow maxi sunburst dress for the mother of the bride.

Though no serious interests have entered Beth's life, someday one will. When that time comes the matron of honor will be Mrs. James (Libby) Wolski, Milwaukee.

Libby Ernest, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Edward Ernest, 1423 N. Union St., adjusts Beth's Elizabethan caplet which she wore during Saturday's wedding. At far right, the long distance friends narrow the gap as they admire the multi-flowered dress made in absentia for a ceremony that was a "people affair." (Post-Crescent Photos by Edward J. Deschler Jr.)

The Laugh's on Beth Weckerle, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Ralph Weckerle, San Juan, Puerto Rico as she rereads letters sent to pen pal, Libby Ernest, 10 years ago. The two had their first face-to-face encounter Thursday as Libby's wedding approached. Beth was maid of honor at Saturday's wedding at Memorial Presbyterian Church.

Do Moms Have Any Rights?

BY ERMA BOMBCEK

A mother wrote me the other day questioning the property rights of mothers. (Who has custody of the ice cubes, transparent tape and the piece of chicken in the condensed chicken soup.)

"Within minutes last weekend," she wrote, "I found my 19-year-old had taken my mascara to Michigan with him to keep his blond moustache noticeable. . . my 11-year-old had scrubbed the grass stains off his gym shoes with my toothbrush. . . and my 4-year-old had taken my magic marker and made hex signs all over my heirloom bedspread. Do mothers have any rights at all?"

It all depends. Do you remember signing anything in the delivery room? Some women sign the maternal vow of poverty while still heavily sedated. I don't remember signing it at all but when I awoke the kids had rights to the fillings in my teeth.

Would it shock you to know I have not found my comb in 15 years and comb my hair by running my fingers through it? Or that everyone has worn my white sweater except the dog? (And only because he looks lousy in white).

At this point I am trying to outlaw the maternal vow of poverty by introducing a Mother's Bill of Rights.

Visitation rights to the kitchen would be limited only to those either cleaning it or cooking in it. A mother would be able to "put by" a small, cold pork chop or a half bottle of cola without planting mines around it.

Persons lifting pencils, paper clips, rubber bands, typewriter ribbons, yardsticks, scissors, hairbrushes and other personal effects of mother would be prosecuted for trespassing.

Daughters pilfering soiled pantyhose would be detained, questioned, given a defense and a trial.

Daughters pilfering clean pantyhose would be shot on the spot.

Husbands returning your car with an empty gas tank are obliged to provide you a rental car and to try harder.

Birthday checks shall not be used to pay the phone bill and school lunches.

Wigs will not be "borrowed" for Trick or Treat and left to moulder in an old shopping bag. And finally, mother will have one suitcase designated for her alone. She may need it.

Army Wives Lambast Ann, Her Advice

DEAR ANN LANDERS: Your advice to Infantryman's wife stank out loud. I refer to the woman whose husband had an 11-month affair in Vietnam with an Army nurse. You told her, "War is hell and a husband doesn't need any more hell when he gets home." You warned her to stop haranguing him or he might start to look for another nurse. If that was my two of them in the car while you take the third one to the hospital because you can't leave them. The most important person in the world suddenly becomes the postman. You live for those letters. And then Ann Landers comes along and tells you to forget it when you learn he has been playing around the whole time. If I lived in Chicago I'd picket your office. — Mobile, Ala.

Dear Girls: O. K. Don't forget it. Remember it. Talk about it constantly. Yell at him. Keep him up nights telling him he's a lowdown, cheating skunk.

Give him the freeze. Punish him good. Make him suffer. After all — you suffered plenty. After a while you'll notice he is no longer defending himself against your tirades. He's become quieter and quieter. And one day it'll be so quiet around your house that you won't be able to stand it. He'll be gone.

DEAR ANN LANDERS: Our daughter is getting married in the fall. Her fiancé has a beautiful voice and she wants him to sing at their wedding. The young man's mother wants him to sing also. My husband and I are not sure this is proper. Please give us your opinion. We will do as you say — From Baltimore
Dear From: If the Baltimore Oriole would like to sing at his own wedding I see no reason why he shouldn't. But make sure he selects something appropriate. For example, "What Kind of Fool Am I" would not be suitable for this occasion.

DEAR ANN LANDERS: I ran across some simple wisdom which I hope you will print in your column. The words are by Dr. Heartzell Wilson and I found them inspiring.
"This is the beginning of a new day. God has given me this day to use as I will. I can waste it or use it for some good purpose. But what I do with this day is important because I have exchanged a day of my life for it. When tomorrow comes, today will be gone forever. I hope I will not regret the price I paid for it." — Minneapolis Reader Dear Mpls: What you describe as "simple wisdom" could serve as a guide for a meaningful life — or it could be a morning prayer. Thank you for sharing.

How will you know when the real thing comes along? Ask Ann Landers. Send for her booklet "Love or Sex and How to Tell the Difference." Send 35 cents in coin and a long, self-addressed, stamped envelope with your request.

Opening lead: Jack of spades.

MacRae lost no time in opening a game demand of two hearts and, after North's positive response, spent even less time in checking on aces on his way to the grand slam. In no-trump yet — a very wise decision.

After the lead of the spade jack, MacRae resisted the impulse to table his hand and decided to "toy around a bit." His second wise decision. If he had played routinely, depending on his "solid" heart suit for eight winners, he would have suffered a rude shock when West produced his heart stopper.

MacRae made his slam as follows. He played dummy's ace of spades and queen of spades. On the spade queen he discarded his diamond ace. Next came the king, queen, and jack of diamonds. On these he discarded his ace, king and queen of clubs.

He did this half in jest and half in seriousness. What delight in discarding all those high cards!

Next came the jack of clubs, and when West produced the club 10, MacRae ran the rest of the clubs. He took the last trick in his own hand with the heart queen. Like a true showman, he had intentionally discarded the ace and king of hearts.

In all, MacRae had discarded the ace of diamonds, the A-K-Q of clubs and the A-K of hearts. "Not every hand that I can afford to throw away 20 points!" he exclaimed.

And when West pointed out that he (West) had held four hearts, and that the heart suit would not have run, MacRae added, "Thank God for show biz. Only a 'ham' would have made this one!"

Stout State Offers Women's Lib Course

MENOMONIE, Wis. — Women's liberation often thought of as a political movement, is becoming an academic subject at Stout State University. There is no placard carrying a bra burning, but there is a great deal of information about the historical, economic and social aspects of women's liberation in the course entitled "The Social Role of Women."

Offered as part of the pre-summer session, the course is being taught by Sheila Tobias, assistant provost from Wesleyan University, Middletown, Conn. An ardent supporter of women's rights, Miss Tobias calls sex discrimination "the last socially accepted prejudice," and feels that women have less political power than they did in the 1920's.

Unlike the suffragette movement, which worked to get women voting rights, the Women's Liberation Movement deals with a woman's self-image, according to Miss Tobias.

"Women are told from birth if they are normal they are dependent, passive, emotional people; that their prime fulfillment comes from parenthood and not work; and that this cannot be changed," she said.

Miss Tobias pointed out that literature and mass media are reinforcing that feeling. "Television stereotypes silly women, needing to be bailed out by their husbands," she said. "Even fairy tales do this. Hansel and Gretel shows Gretel forever breaking down and Hansel forever finding a way."

She also said that history distorts the image of women. "The suffragette movement was a serious political reform and not just a bunch of silly females," she stated. "In the Victorian age, six or seven million women were working in factories, yet the image portrayed of women in that era is one of the proper Victorian lady."

Miss Tobias is herself a liberated woman. The slender, 36-year-old brunette was married last fall, but she retains her maiden name. (In Connecticut a married woman can keep her maiden name, if her husband consents.) She indicated that she has always felt she could not fit into the social pattern women have. "Before women's liberation it was an individual problem," she said. "Now I see that my deviance was a healthy response to a very structured life."

Reacting to militant feminists, she said "I think it's a small fringe." But she added that while she is not a militant, she sympathizes with the extremists "because they carry us forward." Although women's liberation is often considered a political movement, she does not view the course she teaches as political. "It's an academic subject," she said. "It shows how culture affects women's behavior."

Although women's liberation is often considered a political movement, she does not view the course she teaches as political. "It's an academic subject," she said. "It shows how culture affects women's behavior."

In her class she attempts to show students how women struggled for rights in other parts of history. She discusses the suffragette movement in the 20's and how many gains were lost during the depression. "Members of that movement did not create a generation of successors," she said. "It was a revolution that won and lost."

The course also includes discussion of the employment situation for women and "the differential pay and status they have in all professions." Miss Tobias said women do not attain high salaries and positions because men are afraid to promote them. She explained that men fear women will become pregnant; they fear that women will gossip and be difficult to work with; and they fear sexual involvement. "Men don't want to work for women and they don't want to marry smarter women," she said. "This has frustrated many capable and talented women." She noted that women's liberation is helping to ease this problem "by showing that we are not alone."

Miss Tobias feels that the women's liberation is not a passing fancy, but something that will continue until its goals are met. "You can't educate women and give them freedom and still expect them to maintain the role they are playing," she said.

Objection to Site, Not Mobile Home People

Editor, The Post-Crescent:

I'd like to answer Mrs. Kachinsky's letter about mobile homes. She has completely missed the point of our objections. We do not feel that people residing in mobile homes are undesirable. We object to the proposed location of these homes.

1. Mr. Hall has indicated he likes our area because it is "nice". Because of this it will be possible to sell the mobile homes to "a better class of people". People with children will prefer to move into this mobile home park, they will pay a minimum tax rate and their children will crowd our schools.

2. It follows that if we have 260 homes we will have at least 260 automobiles. The proposed plan has one entry that will also serve as an exit. This will spill onto our already congested Wisconsin Avenue.

3. Mobile homes resemble shoe boxes. Nobody can make 260 shoe boxes look attractive.

Buckley Ought to Look At Mobile Home Park

Editor, The Post-Crescent:

May this serve as an open letter to Mayor George Buckley of Appleton and all or any others who may be opposed to the building or opening of new mobile home courts.

First of all, I would like to know what Mr. Buckley fears about these courts? Apparently his and other's thinking is really stuck back in the dark ages. Granted that trailer parks (as they were called) were generally slovenly in appearance and had poor reputations 20 years ago or so. However, the people who are doing all the complaining, including Appleton's good mayor can't have taken a look at some of our newer courts lately. I would like to invite Mr. Buckley to visit our court (Mom and Dads of Menasha) and even inspect my home personally. Perhaps I'm a bit prejudiced, but I would like to have Mr. Buckley tell me to my face what he fears about myself and the other people living in our nicer mobile home courts. The people living here are mostly either young married couples, or retired, all with a distaste for renting, and are all middle class people. Today's mobile homes are not only economical, and very spacious, but are also very attractive. Most of all though, we own them! Our newer courts all have some type of rules or regulations set down, and this of course is what keeps them clean and attractive. Why not allow a new, modern, attractive court and put some of the ones that are eyesores out of business?

A statement of Mr. Buckley's that really irked me was one that equalled mobile home courts with rendering plants. Of course Mr. Buckley probably didn't intend it to sound that way, but a lot of people read the article, and listen to what their mayor says.

To add up what I think about the situation, first of all, I believe Mr. Buckley owes we mobile home owners an apology. Secondly, I think Mr. Buckley owes it to himself and to us to come out and look around a little; as I said I'd be glad to accommodate him. Last, but not least, I believe mobile homes are part of the answer to the housing shortage this country faces today.

When are people in this area going to realize that good, clean and attractive mobile home courts can be an asset to any community?

Democratic Proposal Called 'Pie in the Sky'

Editor, The Post-Crescent

Dear Editor:

Assembly Democrats who are understandably embarrassed by the limited amount of state support for public education contained in their state budget proposal, are now attempting to appease the irate property taxpayer with more grandiose promises.

The latest political facade was put forth by 41 Democrats in the form of a resolution that would establish an interim committee to prepare legislation authorizing the state to assume 90 per cent of the operating costs of Wisconsin's public school system within the next ten years. Presently, 35 per cent of a local school districts' operating costs are assumed by the state. Despite Governor Lucey's campaign promises of a 40 per cent state pickup of these costs, the budget proposal now under consideration, retains the present level of state support, and in many cases, decreases such support.

Assembly Republicans attempted to call the Democrats' bluff by seeking immediate consideration of their empty promise. The Democrats, however, unanimously rejected such a move. The GOP's assistant floor leader, John Shabaz of New Berlin, suggested that the measure might be put in the form of an amendment to the budget and allow an immediate 90 per cent state pickup of education costs.

The Democratic rejection pointed up the absurdity of their proposal. This "pie-in-the-sky" promise of indirect property tax relief is fiscally not feasible. If it was feasible, the Democrats would amend the budget and provide the relief starting in 1971. In reality, however, this proposal would literally bankrupt the State of Wisconsin or drive income and sales taxes to ridiculous heights. Furthermore, it would limit local control over local schools. The citizens of this state should immediately voice their objections to this irresponsible "politicking" at a time when we are considering a matter as serious and far-reaching as this record two billion dollar budget now before us.

Optometric Interests Put Before Those of Public

Editor, The Post-Crescent:

One cannot help but marvel at the persistence of the Wisconsin Optometric Association in its tiresome and continuous efforts to deprive visually handicapped Wisconsin residents of the excellent services provided by department store optometrists.

For fifteen years our legislature has resisted the annual pressures of this greedy special interest lobby on the proper grounds that elimination of reasonably priced professional eye care was contrary to the public interest.

Now, in an astonishing turnabout, the Assembly has voted 70 to 26 against a motion to defeat this discriminatory bill. Why, in this age of consumer awareness, have they suddenly yielded to the demands of this relatively insignificant occupational group?

Would it be possible for The Post-Crescent to print the names of these 70 Assemblymen who have indicated their intention to put the interests of the Wisconsin Optometric Association above those of their own constituents?

Boy Scouts Honor 3 Men

The Valley Council of Boy Scouts presented its highest award, the Silver Beaver, to three Fox Cities men Monday night.

They are Louis J. Schultz, Kaukauna; Joseph Prunuske, Menasha, and Clayton Welson, Appleton.

Schultz has been an adult volunteer in the Boy Scouts since 1945. A maintenance supervisor at Thilmany Pulp and Paper Co., he ran a manual arts center for Scouts and other boys for many years, and is the father of two Eagle Scouts.

He has served Troop 27 at St. Mary's Church as a committee man, cubmaster and scoutmaster and has been active in church affairs and the Knights of Columbus.

Prunuske was cited for his work with Troop 14 at the Congregational Church and with the district's Advancement Committee. He is a printer at American Can Co., and has been a registered adult scout since 1946.

Prunuske is president of the ernor's Commission on Education, which he headed.

Contrast of Success

"What has made scouting different from other areas of education I'm familiar with," he said, "is the contrast between scout success and the lag of volunteers in educational affairs today."

It took 2½ years, Kellett said, to organize 650 volunteers to prepare the commission's report, "Forward Look." The report recommends sweeping changes in Wisconsin's whole system of education and educational management.

But Kellett questioned how valuable the report is "sitting on a shelf bound lovely in ribbons." Implementing the recommendation will take citizen pressure on the lawmakers: "Froehlich, Conradt, Lorge, Rogers, Steinhilber and Ellis — get to them."

Kellett listed three education areas "that are bound to get a higher percentage of our resources in the future." These are, he said, education from birth to age 6; education for employment, and "open education" using media outside the classroom.

The new priorities are held back now by educational institutions acting as political units, competing for scarce funds, he said. Educational reforms will be achieved through volunteer lobbying and through a citizen state board of education which can implement priorities.

Kellett said this idea "isn't going across I did some testing the other day." But he believes the gap between study and effective citizen lobbying can be bridged by the sort of volunteer participation which characterizes the Boy Scouts.

Officers of the seven-county Valley Council retained their positions for another year. Dr. James C. Curry is president; Richard VanSistine, commissioner; Eugene H. Kleinschmidt, treasurer; Richard Loescher and Dexter Wolfe, vice presidents, all of Appleton; Charles Iltis, vice-president is from Neenah.

Dwight Mueller, son of Mr. and Mrs. Emil Mueller, 310 W. Marquette St., Appleton, became an Eagle Scout at the meeting, along with Mike Milbach, son of Mr. and Mrs. Michael Milbach, 1422 Hillcrest Drive, Kaukauna. Both youths were Explorer Scouts.

The Valley Council presently has 180 units, 6,300 boys and 2,000 adult volunteers.

Fund Transfer Endorsed To Aid Ailing Relief Budget

Accepting estimates they had questioned a month ago, Appleton finance committee members Monday recommended a $16,330 fund transfer to partially cover a predicted $32,000 relief budget shortage by year-end.

The committee acted on a recommendation from Finance Director David Champion, with the concurrence of Welfare Director Merton Ehrlicke. The figures were presented in a written memo by Champion giving explanatory information that was lacking when the committee postponed action a month ago on replenishing the rapidly dwindling relief budget.

Champion explained that he and Ehrlicke have agreed that current conditions seem to indicate a relief case load averaging 70 per month for the last seven months of the year, a 64 per cent drop from the average for the first five months.

The average cost per case is $79, and by adding the projected caseload to the 705 already handled by June 1, a total relief cost of $94,500 is expected.

Budget Shortage

The budget, set last December, contains only $61,667, leaving needs which Champion rounded off at $32,000.

The finance director's memo was dated June 2 when the committee last met but was set aside until Monday by other committee business.

Champion also pointed out that the estimated 1971 case load of 1,195 represents a 25 per cent increase over the 955 cases serviced last year.

Woehler Talks At Conference

Free Communication At Local Levels Is Emphasis of Speech

Outagamie County Executive Alvin Woehler Monday called for "free communication between all levels of local government" to assure effective local governmental operations.

In remarks at the County Treasurers, Clerk of Courts and Register of Deeds Conference at the Conway Motor Inn, the newly elected official said the importance of this has been made clear in Outagamie's transition under an elected executive.

"The legislature (County Board), the Executive, the judiciary and various elected officials must have communication for unity because only through unity and the establishment of functional goals can we as a county request changes in the State Legislature through their respective legislators and, therefore, at this point, I wish to emphasize that county government can no longer perform its necessary functions on a status quo basis," he said.

He said broad home rule for counties is needed to meet the challenges of the future.

Woehler, elected to the newly created Outagamie post last April, will discuss the transition problems at the July 19 annual convention of the National Association of Counties at Milwaukee. He has been asked to discuss the problems of the transformation.

Given much the same figures a month ago but lacking the backup data, the committee had declined to make the transfer until Ehrlicke was able to explain. Provided with the memo since then, the committee acted without requiring Ehrlicke to speak, though he was present.

Champion reported the city's reserve for contingencies currently contains $16,330. On his recommendation, the committee advised transferring the fund to the relief budget, leaving the remaining projected shortage to be filled later.

More Charge-Backs

Ehrlicke has pointed out that while the city is spending more on relief cases, it also is receiving more in "charge-backs," paid by other communities for relief administered by Appleton to persons who are legally residents of the other communities.

Champion said the remaining budget shortage could be filled by transferring from the charge-back revenue account and hoping it will increase by the necessary amount. "This is at best a guess that can be made at a time a budget is adopted."

The committee also recommended transfers, which the City Council acts on Wednesday night, totalling $24,655 to cover recently approved pay increases for sewage treatment plant and city hall workers.

The committee declined to act on a request by Planning Director Jack Hetu for a $100 fund transfer to pay for budgeted costs of professional periodicals and memberships.

Champion said the planning budget is considered a single account and therefore transfers are unnecessary within it from one purpose to another. The finance director advised waiting until the end of the year and seeing how Hetu's total budget picture appears.

Board Gives Final Okay To Ferber School Plans

BY ARLEN BOARDMAN
Post-Crescent Staff Writer

Final plans were approved and the advertising for bids authorized Monday night for the planned Edna Ferber Elementary School to be opened next year in North Central Appleton.

The board of education gave the architects the go-ahead to seek bids on the estimated $1.6 million school, with bid opening set for 2 p.m. July 14. Construction probably will start soon afterward.

Robert Duszak, a partner of Sauter, Seaborn, Paster & Duszak architectural firm, Appleton, presented the final plans and the recommended timing for bids.

Board members indicated they wanted assurance that ties between the school and nearby Einstein Junior High would be possible. They suggested a sidewalk, and it was indicated this could be included at the appropriate time.

Near Einstein

The two-story school will be built in the northeastern corner of the old Percy Menning property, about 300 feet northeast of Einstein. Joint use of facilities is planned.

Ferber School, to be completed in September, 1972, will house at least 850 pupils in Kindergarten through grade six with 74,000 square feet of floor space. It will be built on the open concept, with elimination of walls and the use of portable walls, allowing for modern teaching programs and general flexibility.

Accept Low Bids

The board of education also: —Approved purchases of distributive education textbooks which were recommended after a one-year study.

Boettcher said also that in reorganizing the high school removed from each school. The reorganization is an offshoot of the recommendation of the four-man team to run the schools.

In The Red

Dr. Kenneth Johnston, director of administrative services, told the board that the schools now are $63,000 in the red and probably will be farther in the red by the end of the calendar year. He noted he knew of no incident of discriminatory use of the "race" information which is required for reports to state and federal agencies.

Karras Vending at Plamann Is Legal

The controversy over the extension of the Karras Vending Service contract at Plamann Park Lake was laid to rest today by Outagamie County Counsel William Schuh.

In a letter to County Executive Alvin Woehler and County Board Chairman Russell DeLaHunt, Kaukauna, he said the extended contract for providing vending services this summer "is a valid and legal instrument."

He said the terms are within state law, and added that the pact had been executed properly.

Schuh also noted that Supervisor Nick Karras, Appleton, stockholder in the vending firm, didn't vote on the proposition nor "take any part in behalf of the county" in making of the contract.

Approved Contract

Therefore, I am of this date (June 15) forwarding a letter to Karras Vending requesting resumption of operation of its vending machines at Plamann Park on a temporary basis as a matter of public convenience," he wrote. Schuh informed the firm of this.

The controversy arose two months ago when the county board's parks and public property committee approved an extension of the contract awarded to Karras Vending last year as low bidder. Karras is chairman of that committee.

Leading the attack on Karras was Supv. John Schreiter, Appleton, who contended the contract had been improperly handled. The policy and finance committee agreed since it hadn't been ratified by the board.

Schreiter last Tuesday asked for an opinion from Schuh. The board then approved the pact pending the corporation counsel's opinion.

Karras defended the firm and charged that Schreiter was "casting aspersions" over Karras Vending. He said Schreiter should apologize if there weren't any legal charges. None ever were issued.

The vending service generally operates June, July and August at Plamann.

Schuh suggested in his letter to Woehler and DeLaHunt that the county board ratify the concession agreement extension or issue a new contract to replace it.

Supervisors OK Executive Referendum

Spring Vote Planned; Push for Winnebago Administrator Arises

OSHKOSH — Winnebago County supervisors this morning voted unanimously to submit the question of a county executive to voters next spring.

But a resolution creating the position of county administrator was scheduled to be submitted this afternoon by Oshkosh Supv. Eugene Williams.

Williams argued that an administrator could show enough merit in the year and a half before one could be elected to dissuade the electorate. He, along with a majority of supervisors, favors an administrator or status quo, over an executive. An executive is elected and has veto power over the board and the administrator does not.

The petition calling for a vote on the county executive was circulated by Winnebago Organization Restructuring Committee (WORC) over a period of 10 months in the county. It was certified May 21 as having enough signatures. WORC conceived backing of the chambers of commerce of Neenah-Menasha and Oshkosh and the League of Women Voters.

Youth Injured in Fall From Cliff

James Tillman, 13, is in his father's words, "dam lucky," after sustaining various injuries from a 35-foot fall at High Cliff Park, Monday.

James, the son of Mr. and Mrs. Bernard Tillman, 2720 W. Spencer St., Appleton, was camping with friends at the time of the accident. He accidentally rode his bicycle off a cliff, and sustained severe cuts to the head and face, bruises and a fractured right wrist. The accident occurred about 3:30 p.m.

The youth is at St. Elizabeth's Hospital.

Window Shattered on Bus, Police Investigate Rifle Shot Possibility

An investigation is continuing into the possible shooting out of a window Monday afternoon on a bus owned by Fox River Bus Lines, Inc.

The incident occurred while a bus was traveling north on S. Weaver Street at about 5:40 p.m. The driver of the bus reported hearing a sound like a firecracker explosion or rifle shot before the second window on the left side of the bus shattered.

A passenger in the bus escaped injury, despite the fact that she was in line with the window. Glass from the window scattered throughout the bus.

In their preliminary investigation, police found a marble among the glass fragments on the ground at the scene of the incident.

The finance director's memo was dated June 2 when the committee last met but was set aside until Monday by other committee business.

Champion also pointed out that the estimated 1971 case load of 1,195 represents a 25 per cent increase over the 955 cases serviced last year.

Hearing Set for Woman Charged With Murder

OSHKOSH — A preliminary hearing has been scheduled for 10 a.m. Aug. 4 for Helen Harn, 53, of Wisconsin Rapids, who has been charged with first degree murder in the shooting death of her husband.

Mrs. Harn appeared before Judge James V. Sitter Monday in Winnebago County Court Branch 3. She had been sent to Winnebago County Hospital on April 15 for a 60-day period of observation. A hospital report said Mrs. Harn is competent to participate in her defense.

Sitter reduced bond from $25,000 to $2,500.

40 MGD Sewer Plant Design Gets Approval in Twin Cities

NEENAH-MENASHA — The sewerage commission voted four to one to build a 40 million gallon a day plant Monday night. Thomas Wintheiser was the dissenter, and it all but closed the door on industry-backed options contained in the Roy F. Weston Co. report.

A letter from Department of Natural Resources (DNR) head of environmental protection Thomas Frangos to commission president Gilbert Krueger was the final weight Frangos said. "Design for a minimum flow of 40 MGD." The DNR controls federal and state grants.

Frangos' letter also said the DNR had reviewed design concepts being used by commission engineers Consoer & Townsend and accepted them as a reasonable approach.

The alternate design, no primary treatment, suggested by Weston has never been given approval by the DNR as far as Frangos knew. He said the department was reviewing Weston's report and would comment later.

Weston's local spokesman James Asmuth of Wisconsin Tissue Mills got a letter from DNR head of industrial wastewater Robert Krill. Krueger read a copy. Asmuth was not at the meeting.

Krill said he had a number of points of basic disagreement with Weston's ideas and a number where additional data was required. For example, Weston uses a monthly average basis for calculating removal of biochemical oxygen demand material (BOD) and suspended solids as a way of "reducing plant size," since, on the aver-

Menasha Puts Ceiling On School Spending

BY PETER BOCK
Post-Crescent Staff Writer

MENASHA — The fiscal control board Monday night unanimously passed a resolution limiting the spending of the board of education to no more than $287,000 over the amount approved for calendar year 1971.

Mayor James Adams told the fiscal body he was taking the action to forestall what in previous years have been last-minute budget demands by the board.

The resolution, which will come before the city council tonight for final consideration, includes all operational costs, capital outlay costs and debt service costs for the year.

Fishing Trip Yields Perfect Card Hand; Doesn't Finish Game

Robert Spooner, 1719 W. Reid Drive, Appleton, went fishing last weekend and caught a perfect cribbage hand.

While on a fishing outing near Eagle River, Spooner got involved in a cribbage game and was dealt a perfect hand by John Synder, Oconomowoc.

"Everyone was so excited," Spooner said, "we never finished the game."

The perfect 28-point hand included three fives and a jack and the fourth five in the same suit as the jack was cut.

The chances of being dealt such a hand are reportedly one in 1.5 million.

The fiscal control board has absolute control over tax money provided for the expenditures of the board of education. The resolution aims at eliminating the need for cutting the board's budget after it is submitted.

The resolution states that "this is not a maximum amount we expect the board of education to expend. It is a goal of increased expenditures to remain under."

Adams computed that if the board were to receive, under the resolution, the maximum amount of $287,000, the city budget would be thrust into the neighborhood of $3.5 million.

Affecting the fiscal control body's action is a bill pending in the state legislature that would require individual school districts to absorb the full costs for retired school teachers.

Neenah Okays Funds For Overpass

NEENAH — A resolution calling for a commitment of $350,000 as the city's share of the proposed Breezewood overpass and extension will be presented to the city council Wednesday night.

The finance committee unanimously endorsed the resolution Monday to make sure the city's share of the financing would be available.

Earlier in the day, city officials met with the Winnebago County highway committee and two members of the Town of Neenah board to discuss possible financing for the proposed $800,000 project.

According to current thinking, half the project cost could be handled through a state administered FAS (federal aid secondary) fund, with the local municipalities (county, town and city) picking up the other half.

In a cost breakdown suggested by County Highway Commissioner Robert Graf, the city would pay about $289,000; the town, about $39,000, and county, about $75,000 (earmarked for the overpass).

The city and town would be expected to handle the right-of-way purchase and engineering charges.

Wayne Bryan, public works director, told the finance committee that the right-of-way and engineering would add another $50,000 to $60,000 to the project cost.

He said $350,000 would be enough to handle the city's share of the cost. The resolution will authorize Mayor Roman V. Hauser to negotiate a short-term loan for the money.

OSHKOSH — The question of "who's going to mow the grass" has created a rift between Winnebago Highway Commissioner Robert Graf and Airport Manager Michael Brock.

Last week, the airport committee gave its approval for Brock's leasing a tractor and 12-foot mower to keep the grass around the airport cut.

But the move has raised the ire of Graf who says a highway commission 15-foot mower will sit idle during the summer because of no grass to cut.

Graf charged Brock with "lack of cooperation" for making the move to lease a tractor and mower, without contacting him (Graf) first.

The two men met head-on in the dispute Monday during a highway committee meeting to discuss the mower problem.

Graf said the highway department purchased the larger 15-foot model because it planned to use it at the airport.

Brock, however, said hiring up at another meeting, age, these design flows and loads will be equalled or exceeded three days a month."

Krill said this was exactly the opposite way the DNR intended the monthly average to be used.

The plant has to be able to treat the unusually heavy day's waste, not bypass it.

90 Pct. Removal

The Lake Michigan Wastewater Conference requires at least 90 per cent removal of BOD and suspended solids. Weston admits its method can't remove that high a percentage of solids.

Weston recommends no extra room be built into the plant for industrial expansion. "It is not common practice," Weston says Krill says, "That is not true in Wisconsin."

He couldn't agree with the estimated design flow of 30 MGD. Weston based its costs upon. "It should be a minimum of 40 MGD." The letter backed that up by citing the excessive clear water problem in the Twin Cities.

Consoer & Townsend's review of Weston's interim report treatment would not only cost of Weston's interim report found that their version of treatment would not only cost more to build, it would also cost more to operate than the plant C&T is designing.

Speculative Approach

C&T engineer Gerald Brask, captain of a three-engineer squad, called Weston's scaling up to 30 MGD from a small and brief laboratory bench study, "an extremely speculative approach."

Weston's design loadings on aeration tanks, sludge thickeners and vacuum filters are approximately 100 per cent greater than C&T's. And Weston recommends only one incinerator.

Summarizing, C&T said, "It is our opinion that sludge thickening and dewatering units should be designed on a more conservative basis than proposed in the Weston plan; that at least two sludge combustion units should be provided so that at least partial operation can take place during incinerator repairs; that a plant designed around the Weston plan will not result in significant savings in construction cost if it incorporates sludge handling facilities, which we regard as necessary; and that operating costs of a plant designed around the Weston plan will be greater."

Operating Costs

Operating costs would increase because more power would be used to operate machinery. For the air blowers alone, the added costs would be $45,000 to $65,000 a year.

Construction costs for a 30 MGD plant projected by C&T are: for its design, $19.8 million; for Weston's with C&T's demanded sludge handling gear, $20.6 million; for Weston's with DNR recommended loadings on aeration tanks, $24.5 million. Brask said that C&T's plan scaled up to 40 MGD, as it now must be, would cost $23 to $24 million dollars. That includes a 10 per cent cushion for inflating construction costs.

Grass-Cutting Job Results in Dispute

OSHKOSH — The question of "who's going to mow the grass" has created a rift between Winnebago Highway Commissioner Robert Graf and Airport Manager Michael Brock.

Last week, the airport committee gave its approval for Brock's leasing a tractor and 12-foot mower to keep the grass around the airport cut.

Graf charged Brock with "lack of cooperation" for making the move to lease a tractor and mower, without contacting him (Graf) first.

The two men met head-on in the dispute Monday during a highway committee meeting to discuss the mower problem.

Graf said the highway department purchased the larger 15-foot model because it planned to use it at the airport.

Brock, however, said hiring up at another meeting,

Who Gets Ice Cream Profit?

MENASHA — An ice cream stand made big money this school year for the eighth grade class at Maplewood Junior High School. Now the students are fighting to keep their earnings with them into senior high school.

The matter was brought to the attention of the school board Monday night, which after much discussion, tabled the issue so that students and faculty members could get together to go over the whole situation and the problems.

The problem is that the board has a policy which states that money earned by the students must stay with the building in which it was earned. It can, however, stay with a particular class in that building.

Can't Retain Money

Supt. Alan Osterndorf said that this policy was evidently not pointed out to the school's principal, Gordon Mortensen, when the school opened for the first time this school year, and the students believed that they could keep the money with them through senior high school.

There is about $1,000 left in the eighth grade fund. James Koslowski, a faculty member at Maplewood, said he felt the board "will turn off the Class of 1975" if the money couldn't stay with the students through senior high.

"I think we realize a mistake has been made," Lee Murphy, another faculty member said. They made the money, put a lot of effort into it, and he suggested letting them take it with them to senior high school with the understanding that it would be shared with the other half of the Class of 1975 coming from Butte des Morts Junior High School.

Forrest Weber said he also felt the money should stay with the students, right or wrong. He said it is a "sad state of affairs" to turn kids off.

Speaking on behalf of the students was eighth grader Kurt VandenBoogaard, who said the students were told that the money would stay with them, and so their objective was to make as much as they could.

He also said he felt that if the funds left had been much less, like $100, nothing would have been said but Osterndorf said it would remain with the building, had it been 50 cents.

VandenBoogaard said that the board established the policy, so therefore it could change it.

Board member Robert Bryan said that there wouldn't be much sense in having board policies if they weren't to be followed.

The youth said he felt the Class of 1975 would be turned off if it couldn't keep the funds, and would become bitter, and have no desire.

"If you let it," Osterndorf replied.

He added that goals in the school should be working together with friends in the school, for the school.

VandenBoogaard said he didn't think the schools should be the topic, but the Class of 1975.

Menasha Mayor Hits Plan Agency

MENASHA — Charges that now exists with the two planning agencies are "playing political football" currently. A danger in with-brought a plea Monday night drawing, Adams said, would be from Mayor James Adams that the possibility that Menasha the city withdraw from the Fox would be "mousetrapped between the forces" that lie to the south and north of the city.

The measure, in the form of a resolution that urged the creation of new tri-county planning agency incorporating the best aspects of COG and the Northeastern Wisconsin Regional Planning Commission, will come tonight. Adams, lamenting the fact that "we were going nowhere" regarding COG, brought the proposal before the committee-of-the-whole.

Adams said earlier Monday he had consulted with Oshkosh City Council President Byron Murken and Mayor George Buckley, Appleton, and they concurred with his plan.

6-Month Notice

According to COG bylaws, a participating member desiring to withdraw must give six-months notice. According to that code, Menasha is well within the time limit. The resolution if passed tonight by the council, would eliminate the city from COG by Jan. 1, 1972.

COG and Northeastern recently have been challenged in several quarters by detractors who claim their programs overlap and add to the confusion of an already governmentally-fragmented Fox Valley region.

Adams said that the city's proposed five-year park program would not be jeopardized by the withdrawal since it has already been approved by COG. That approval is essential before the city could file applications for federal and state aids.

Adams said he took the move to "eliminate the creation of a bureaucracy," which he said

Radical Approach for Court Changes Needed

Edwin M. Wilke, court administrator for the State of Wisconsin, told clerks of courts today that a radical approach was needed to revamp the Wisconsin County Court system.

Wilke was speaking to an annual Seminar of Clerks of the Circuit Court which was meeting in conjunction with the convention of county register of deeds and county treasurer associations.

He said the radical approach was "the only one to be taken if we are going to overhaul the court system."

Overhaul of Courts

Wilke told of a consensus statement of the National Conference of the Judiciary which met in March and drew up recommendations for the overhaul and modification of courts.

One change in the court administration system, recommended by the national conference is the establishment of a national judicial center for state courts. This originally was proposed by the Chief Justice of the United States.

The individual state courts should be placed under the control of the State Supreme Court, whose chief justice should be the chief executive officer of the unified court system, Wilkie said.

Case Files

The chief justice should be assisted in his duties by a statewide executive officer whose duties would include the development and operation of a modern system of court management which would include an up-to-date budget system, personnel practices and modern procedures for the gathering, storing and retrieving of information.

One of the most difficult duties in courts today is collecting all information and files on any one case, Wilke said.

He also said he favored the hiring of additional personnel and state funding, if necessary, to bring the needed help and machinery into courts.

Wilke also favored the establishment of court executive officers for each court in the system to expedite the quick decision of court cases.

Induction Is Suspended for War Protestor

OSHKOSH — Tom Tomasko, 1932 Nebraska St., a peace movement organizer who was recently drafted and told to report on Wednesday, has been informed by his draft board that his induction has been postponed until further notice.

Tomasko received notice of his induction on May 28 and wrote a letter to the Adjutant General of the Army informing him of his antiwar activities and intention to continue them in the Army.

In the letter he listed his past activities and membership in groups which the Army considers to be controlled by the Socialist Workers Party.

He also said he was willing to serve in the Army and later said he would go to Vietnam if sent. He said he did not receive a reply from the Adjutant General.

Tomasko said the letter informing him of the postponed induction date did not give any reason for the action, but he attributes it to the fact that "the GI antiwar movement has grown tremendously in the past few years. The Army does not want to draft antiwar activists who would only spur on this movement by organizing it into an effective voice of opposition to this genocidal war."

Tomasko said a rally which was scheduled for 6:45 a. m. on Wednesday, when he was originally scheduled to leave for Milwaukee, will be held despite the postponement. It will be held on the east side of the Oshkosh Post Office.

permission if he already had begun the practice. Miller replied it was because Champion had told a supervisor that the action needed committee approval. To this Champion explained he didn't feel he should take on more work without permission from the committee.

Ald. Alvin Tews (5th), chairman, told Miller he would have acted "exactly as you did," without realizing that "it might create some added problems somewhere else."

The committee approved Miller's recommendation and Champion said the action would appear in the committee minutes but would not be sent to the City Council for approval — and possible further debate.

Panel OKs Limited Use of Two Streets for Recreation

Two streets that serve primarily as commercial drive-ways would be barricaded occasionally and used as a recreation area by Appleton Youth Drop In Center, according to a request given preliminary approval Monday.

The streets and sanitation committee sent to the City Council a recommendation to allow the center to block Bates and Dunlap Streets occasionally, subject to restrictions.

The permission would be granted with the provisions that trucks or emergency vehicles would not be blocked, the area would be kept clean, the city attorney would make certain no insurance complications result, the streets are not barricaded after dark and proper barricades are used.

The provisions, drafted by Traffic Engineer Walter Johnson, also urge that the young people be encouraged to use the city's parks as much as possible.

The drop in center rents space in the Appleton Labor Temple on Appleton Street.

In other action, the committee recommended placing S. Oneida Street on the 1972 street reconstruction schedule.

Ald. Beverly Wieckert (11th) recently requested a study of pavement conditions on the thoroughfare in the industrial "Flats" area. The stretch lies between the north end of the drawbridge and the West Canal Bridge.

Gov. Lucey Clarifies Stand on Home at King

A letter from Gov. Patrick Lucey to the Ladies' Auxiliary of Harvey Pierre Post 2778 clarified his position on the stand he is taking concerning the Grand Army Home at King. The governor wrote, "First, let me assure you that I have not asked the Legislature to in any way reduce veterans' care at King. Present services will not be eliminated and those people currently at the Veterans' Home will not be misplaced. In fact, I have recommended that services provided at the Grand Army Home be continued at their present level. "It is expected, however, that in the near future, there will be a dramatic increase in the number of veterans who will require some type of institutional care. Expanding the facilities at King to accommodate so large a group can only be done at enormous, additional expense to the state. I have therefore suggested that before such a commitment be made, the state should consider whether there are alternative ways to provide for the needs of our veterans which might provide them with a comparable or higher level of care at a lesser cost. For example, many individuals who require special care have registered a preference for being placed in a home or hospital in their local community, his makes it easier for family and friends to visit and for the institutional resident to spend time with those whose companionship is more valued." Concluding, Lucey stated, "We are fortunate to have good hospital and care centers in almost all of our communities. Therefore, I have suggested to the Legislature that before the state commits itself to the expansion of the costly services at the King Home, we should first explore the possible advantages of making better use of existing facilities throughout the state." The Governor's letter was read at Tuesday's meeting by legislative chairman, Mrs. Gerald Lynch. Also on the agenda was the announcement of delegates to attend the National Convention at Dallas, Tex., Aug. 13 through Aug. 20. They include Mrs. Carl Melchert, Mrs. Edward Kies, Mrs. Oscar Van Ryzin, Mrs. Tom McNamara, Mrs. Ralph Sanders. Treats and cases of coffee were donated to the Tomah Hospital and donations were made to the local cancer fund. It was also made known that the Department Convention is scheduled for June 23 through June 26 at Kenosha with many local post and auxiliary members attending. Public card parties are held at 2 p.m. every Thursday at the VFW Club, 501 N. Richmond St. Lunch was served by Mrs. Sanders and Mrs. Harry Hitter.

Kuhn Fines Tribe $5,000

Bonus Arrangements With Four Players Are Invalidated

NEW YORK (AP) — One of baseball's largest fines, $5,000, has been slapped on the Cleveland Indians for separate bonus arrangements with four players, one of them star pitcher Sam McDowell.

Commissioner Bowie Kuhn fined the American League club Monday and invalidated the bonus agreements with McDowell, first baseman Ken Harrelson, third baseman Graig Nettles and outfielder Vada Pinson.

Kuhn said the club was fined for violating "long standing prohibitions in the major league rules against bonuses for playing, pitching and batting skill."

"The decision of the commissioner has been made and there is nothing we can do about it," commented Gabe Paul, president of the Indians.

No details of the bonus arrangements were given except that they were for varying amounts based on specified levels of performance. Kuhn said they "were also invalid because

Angel's Johnson Accuses Ruiz Of Pulling Gun

ANAHEIM (AP)—Alex Johnson and Chico Ruiz. The American League's batting champion and its all-star benchwarmer, Johnson is moody, bitter, talented. Ruiz, less gifted but happy-go-lucky.

Johnson is on the California Angels roster despite his temperament, Ruiz perhaps because of it.

They have been teammates in two leagues, and once they were roommates and close friends. Ruiz is the godfather of Johnson's 18-month-old daughter, Jennifer. But today they are embroiled in a bizarre incident that is the latest to wrack the Angels.

Johnson says Ruiz, for some still unexplained reason, pulled a gun on him in the Angels clubhouse Sunday. Ruiz describes Johnson's account as "preposterous."

Makes Investigation

The team's general manager, Dick Walsh, told a news conference before Monday night's game with Boston that he was investigating the alleged incident.

So far, Walsh hasn't talked to the security guard Johnson says he related the incident to, or found the handgun Johnson

Phils Continue Giants' Slump; LA Wins

Monday being Flag Day, the San Francisco Giants continued to wave.

The beleaguered Giants, still unable to shake the June bugs, lost for the 10th time in 13 games this month, bowing to Philadelphia 9-4. Combined with Los Angeles' 3-2 victory over the New York Mets, it pared the Giants' lead in the National League West to five games. It stood at 10½ on June 1.

Elsewhere, Houston nipped Pittsburgh 5-4, Cincinnati whipped St. Louis 7-2, the Chicago Cubs edged Atlanta 3-2 and San Diego shaded Montreal 2-1.

The day started out badly for the Giants with the announcement that slugging Willie McCovey will have his ailing knees re-examined when the team returns home Thursday and may need an operation. It didn't take long for things to get worse.

Utilityman Frank Johnson was struck in the face by a ball during infield practice and was unconscious for at least 10 minutes. X-rays were negative but Johnson was said to be suffering from "ataxia to the right," which means he veers to the right when he walks.

The Phillies then gave Gaylord Perry a severe case of ataxia to the showers. Willie Montanez started it with a first-inning homer and the Phils extended that slugging Willie McCovey will have his ailing knees re-examined when the team returns home Thursday and may need an operation. It didn't take long for things to get worse.

Ewing Drives in 5 Against Hawks

Hypnotist's Hex Fails, as Foxes Score 10-2 Victory

WATERLOO, Iowa — Neither a hypnotist's hex nor the antics of Waterloo manager Steve Boros could prevent the Appleton Foxes from storming to their fifth straight win, 10-2, at the Hawks' expense Monday night.

Righthander Mike Atkinson evened his record at 4-4 in hurling the triumph, which kept the Foxes in front of the Midwest League's Northern Division by a 2-game margin over runnerup Cedar Rapids.

Tonight the Foxes open a vital 3-game series against the Cardinals in Cedar Rapids.

Saw Ewing, the Foxes' hard-hitting right fielder, boosted his season average to .500 last night with a 3-for-5 performance, counting two doubles and a homer for five RBI. His circuit blow in the first frame got the Foxes off to a 3-0 advantage.

Waterloo, which fell to its 29th loss against just 18 victories for the season, employed the hypnotist — Jack Roland — to put some of the Hawk players in trances before the game in hopes of improving their confidence and concentration.

Rubber Chicken

To further insure a Waterloo win, Roland stood atop the dugout, waving a rubber chicken and setting off smoke bombs to "hex" the Foxes.

Appleton players evidently paid little attention to the shenanigans, however, as they jumped off to a 4-0 lead after three innings. The Hawks came back with a run in the fourth, but then the Foxes put the game away with a 4-run fifth, highlighted by Joe Talley's 2-run single.

Boros was kicked out of the contest by umpire Rick Gardner in the sixth inning for protesting too strongly on a pitch.

Then in the top of the eighth, with Appleton's Lamar Johnson on first base via a walk and Ewing batting, Boros came back onto the field and ran to the center field scoreboard.

New Sign

Reaching behind the center-field fence, Boros came up with a sign that read "UMPIRES" and promptly had the boy on the scoreboard place it over the "VISITORS" sign.

The ruffled umpires ordered the sign be taken down, but the right side with men on first and second. But second base

Tony Taylor Raps Decisive Double In Detroit Win

By KEN RAPPOPORT
Associated Press Sports Writer

The Detroit Tigers have a new Taylor with an old habit.

Tony Taylor, who helped the Philadelphia Phillies win many games in 11 years with the National League club, now is sewing up victories with his new team at Detroit.

Taylor, traded last week, made an impressive debut Sunday with three hits in a winning effort and Monday night, banged two more—including the game-winner—as the Tigers shaded the Chicago White Sox 4-3 in 10 innings.

"I'm very happy to have this kind of start in Detroit," said Taylor.

Great Play

Taylor almost delivered the winning hit two innings earlier when he rifled a grass-cutter to the right side with men on first and second. But second base

Frank Lane's Youth Movement Continues

BALTIMORE (AP) — The youth movement of the Milwaukee Brewers continues under the direction of 72-year-old Frank Lane.

The latest through the revolving door, as the Brewers attempt to rebuild the team inherited from the Seattle Pilots, is Rob Ellis, Milwaukee's No. 1 choice in the secondary phase of last week's free agent draft.

Ellis, 20, who batted .407 with Michigan State during the past collegiate season, joined the Brewers in Baltimore Monday night before the game against the Orioles was postponed by rain.

"Seattle took a lot of established players in the expansion draft after the 1968 season," said Lane, Milwaukee's director of baseball operations. "They were trying for instant success."

'Grab Kids'

"Now, Dave Bristol (Milwaukee manager) and myself are trying to weed out the old heads. The owners have told us not to sacrifice the future, but to grab kids and build."

Lane, known for his wheeling and dealing throughout a colorful baseball career, hasn't lost the touch after several years of serving as a super scout for the Orioles.

Milwaukee's current 25-man squad includes 11 players who weren't even on the team's 39-man preseason roster.

"We're an expansion team, but we're not in an expansion town," Lane said. "Milwaukee had some great teams not too long ago."

"We know the fans would rather have a better club now, but we've got to build. Whenever we

SPORT FANS!
I BET YOU DIDN'T KNOW

By John Behnke

Here's one to bring back some memories for you... It was just 20 years ago this season that the Giants staged one of the great pennant races of all-time as they finished first after being 13 1/2 games behind in August — and it's a good time to recall the players on that team... How many of the regulars on the famous 1951 Giants can you name? ... Infielders were Whitey Lockman, Eddie Stanley, Alvin Dark and Bobby Thomson... Outfielders: Monty Irvin, Willie Mays and Don Mueller... Catcher: Wes Westrum... And the leading pitchers were Larry Jansen, Jim Hearn and Sal Maglie... We hope those names brought some pleasant nostalgia for you.

Did you know there's a big league baseball player who was once a concert pianist, and as a boy appeared as a soloist at Carnegie Music Hall in New York?... He's outfielder Al Ferrara of the San Diego Padres.

Here's an interesting puzzle... Suppose a batter is at the plate with two strikes... The next pitch comes in and the batter swings and misses — but, at the same time he swings, the ball hits him... What's the ruling?... Is it a strike out, or is it a hit batsman with the batter entitled to go to first base... Even some players aren't sure of the rule, but baseball rules say if you swing and miss at a pitch even though the ball hits you, it is not a hit batsman, but it is a strike.

I bet you didn't know... FREE Baseball tickets are available at our store. Retailers Booster game Saturday night, June 19. Foxes vs. Twins.

Jacklin Hungry, Doesn't Believe in Jinx

REDMORE, Pa., (AP) — No longer than any of the others. "I never have played an entire year well," said the 26-year-old Britain who in 1969 won the British Open. "Normally I have a slump. But this one lasted too long. I'm not playing that badly, although my short game isn't good as it should be. I guess I have to be patient and not rush things."

Jacklin, who won at Hazletine last year by seven strokes with a 281, feels his game has been distracted because of the personal appearances resulting from his Open triumph.

"It's been difficult to keep my mind on my game," he said. His finished finish this year has been a tie for seventh in the Greensboro Open.

Jacklin also has been worried by a threat upon his life, and another to bomb his wife's home in Belfast. He said that he had received a cable from a newspaper that it had an anonymous call making the threats against Jacklin if he played in the Gallagher Ulster Tournament.

Takes No Chance "I guess the reason for the threat is that my wife's family is Protestant and there was a report they had donated money to the Orangemen Fund," Jacklin said. "They say the IRA (Irish Republican Army) is behind the threat, but it denied it."

Jacklin is taking no chances. He has withdrawn from the Ulster Tournament scheduled for later this month. He explained that if he played it would attract a lot of attention and that he would need a police guard and there would be letters, "and besides they might do it," he added.

Jacklin is extremely impressed with Merion's 36-34-70 course. He believes a good driving game is necessary to stay out of trouble. He describes the greens as fantastic, noting that to win he will have to putt very well.

Most of the players were out on the course Monday despite periods of heavy rain. Billy Casper, who won the Open in 1959 and again in 1966, said of Merion, "Many modern day (golf) architects could take a good lesson from this course."

MENASHA — Bonduel, which overcame an early 6-run deficit, exploded for five runs with two out in the top of the 12th to defeat Waupaca, 12-7, for the championship of the third annual Menasha Athletic Association baseball tournament Monday night.
The Menasha Macs took third place money by beating Kewaunee, 6-3, in a 7-inning game.
Mark Hinske, Macs outfielder, received the outstanding hitting trophy, while the pitcher award went to Bonduel's Glenn Berkahn, who pitched all 12 innings Monday. He also won his team's first two games in relief.
Waupaca jumped on Berkahn sending the game into extra for six runs in the fourth inning.
Grignon singled to ignite the winners' 12th inning barrage. He was bunted to second by Jim Reinke and stayed there as Dick Bucholtz flied to left.
Pat Wudke was safe on a throwing error, Grignon scoring. Jim Kamke followed with a walk and Dennis Stoltenow singled home Reinke. Kamke tallied on a wild pitch, and Pues accounted for the fourth and fifth runs with a homer to right, his third of the tourney.
John Holly started on the mound for Waupaca but gave way to Ken Tappa in the fifth. They were touched for 12 hits while Waupaca made eight off Berkahn.
Stoltenow and Grignon each had three for Bonduel and Pues and Bucholtz collected two. Bob Weller, Doug Peterson and Jeff Jones netted two apiece for the Lakemans.
Hinske cracked a bases-empty homer and two doubles to lead the Macs to their win over Kewaunee.
The Menashans scored a run in the first, two in the second, one in the third and two in the sixth.
Kewaunee posted one in the fourth, on Jerry Augustine's fourth homer of the tourney, and two in the seventh.
Tim Bigalke started for Menasha but was relieved by Dan Ferry in the seventh. Bruce Parkovich went the route for the Chiefs. Kewaunee had four hits; the Macs double that total.

Phil Gets Good Workout

Regan Wins First Start In 4 Years After Trade Scare, Umpire-Frisking

BY JERRY LISKA
CHICAGO (AP) — Phil Regan, the Chicago Cubs venerable relief pitcher, got a trade, winning homer for the Cubs in seven days.
"My control improved as the game progressed," said Regan, who now has a 2-2 record for 34 innings.
That's when Pepitone ruined the shutout bid of Atlanta's Phil Niekro, with the second game-winning homer for the Cubs in seven days.
"I wasn't too bothered when the umpire checked my glove, and the back of my head for whatever they were looking for. And I thought that plate umpire, Billy Williams, called a good game."

In 1966, Regan was Fireman of the Year for the pennant-winning Dodgers with a 14-1 record as a bullpen artist.
"I thought after 10 years as a Detroit Tigers starter I might be a starter for the Dodgers, but Don Sutton came along and I've mainly been a relief pitcher since," said Regan.
In his last start in 1967, Regan lost to the Cincinnati Reds 4-0, lasting five innings.
Although Durocher said Regan might get another starting call, Phil conceded that Monday's starting effort would help him in the bullpen.

"I got the work I really needed," said Regan. "The cool weather helped a lot and I threw only 68 pitches because they were hitting the first and second throws. I threw some curves and palm pitches which I don't use in short relief work. Usually I rely only on sinkers and sliders."

"There's no way the umpires can do such a thing without a ball being thrown. That's harassment," fumed Durocher.
Harrassed or not, Regan weathered a wobbly start, and despite yielding nine hits he trailed only 2-0 when lifted for a pinch-hitter in the eighth.

Even before Regan threw his first pitch in his first start since Aug. 12, 1967, when he was a Los Angeles Dodger he was subjected to scrutiny by umpire Augie Donatelli for grease which rival teams for years claimed Phil somehow applies to his sinker.

Durocher was incensed by the move.

Ignores Advice of Party's Top Moderates in Antiwar, Anti-FBI Talks

BY ROWLAND EVANS AND ROBERT NOVAK
WASHINGTON — When Sen. Edmund Muskie went to Austin, Texas, May 22 for the dedication of the Lyndon B. Johnson library, he was subjected to an unsolicited, unvarnished lecture on practical politics from two of the Democratic party's shrewdest moderates: Gov. Marvin Mandel of Maryland and Lt. Gov. Ben Barnes of the state.

The Mandel-Barnes lecture, delivered in the privacy of Barnes' apartment in the state capitol, boiled down to this: Muskie's appearance at antiwar rallies, sponsorship of the April 24 Washington demonstration and attack on the FBI did more harm than good with rank-and-file voters. Forget this nonsense and concentrate instead on unemployment, inflation, and other failures of President Nixon's economic policy.

Considering the lack of rebuttal from Muskie, Barnes thought he had scored some points. Consequently, he was most unpleasantly surprised one week later when Muskie, speaking at Washington and Jefferson College, Washington, Pa., praised "voices of peaceful dissent" and asserted, "we cannot put Vietnam on some back shelf." The speech went directly contrary to the Mandel-Barnes advisory.

Politically, it won Muskie no credits from either the governor of Maryland or the lieutenant governor of Texas. Thus, Barnes, the rising political power in Texas, came to Washington last week saying publicly that Sen. Hubert H. Humphrey was the Democrat who would be best for President in Texas and saying privately that Muskie was making mistakes now that might make him unelectable in 1972 if nominated.

Nor is Barnes' reaction wholly isolated. Muskie's embrace of antiwar protesters transformed Rep. Clement Zablocki from an enthusiastic supporter to a fence-sitter. His attack on the FBI enraged a key figure in the regular Chicago Democratic organization who previously had been plugging Muskie with Mayor Richard J. Daley.

Not Fatal
None of this self-inflicted damage is fatal or near fatal. As we have reported, Muskie remains the front-runner because of his personal allure to the voter and in spite of his strategy. But the fact remains that while Muskie's attention to the war and civil liberties questions have cost him badly needed strength from the party center, they show no signs of pacifying the left.

Moreover, the polls reflect that this phenomenon may be reaching down to the voters. Muskie's fall-off in the South was partially explained by voters shocked by his sponsoring a peace rally organized by far left elements. His Gallup Poll decline in trial heats with

Mr. Nixon was caused when older, richer, and more conservative voters switched (a normal return of strength to the Republicans, according to Muskie's own analysts, but perhaps also an effect of Muskie's leftward drift).

Besides expressing his convictions, Muskie's statements on the war and the FBI have a definite, concrete political purpose to convince the left not to abandon him as Democratic nominee in 1972 as it did Humphrey in 1968.

But there is another, less rational reason for Muskie's recurrent leftward swings. His campaign staff is studded with veterans of the 1968 McCarthy and Kennedy campaigns, with few Humphreyites on board. His newest speechwriter, Robert Shrum, is fresh from the staff of Mayor John V. Lindsay of New York and could scarcely be expected to treat bread-and-butter subjects in a way pleasing to Marvin Mandel and Ben Barnes.

First Speech
For instance, Shrum's first speechwriting effort was an anti-Vietnam polemic intended for a May 15 fund-raiser in Milwaukee. It was rejected, partly out of a desire not to offend Rep. Zablocki. But like Lazarus, it returned as the Washington and Jefferson speech which so irritated Barnes.

That speech dovetails with the courtship by Muskie operatives of 1968 McCarthy leaders — such as Sarah Kovner, a leading Manhattan reformer. Yet, most assuredly, if and when Eugene McCarthy signals an indepen-

Bishop Claims Chicanos Are Largely Ignored

HOUSTON, Tex. (AP) — Auxiliary Bishop Patrick F. Flores of San Antonio says that while Mexican-Americans compose 28 per cent of the nation's Roman Catholics, they have fewer than 200 priests and only two bishops.

Flores told the Catholic Press Association recently that its members had largely ignored the plight of Mexican-Americans.

Speaking at a luncheon during the association's national convention, Flores said that although a few Catholic newspapers have tried to help, "they have barely scratched the surface."

He said among conditions impeding the progress of the Spanish-speaking population was the fact that they are treated as "mentally retarded" in school but mentally healthy at draft age and when being punished for crime.

Jury Indicts 2 in Theft Of Locomotive

CHICAGO (AP) — Two men, one from Illinois, have been indicted by a federal grand jury in connection with the theft of a Chicago and North Western Railway locomotive which was taken from switching yards in Crystal Lake, Ill., and rammed into an empty passenger train 27 miles away in Lake Geneva, Wis.

Charged in the March 18 incident were Nicky Fanelli, 18, with no listed address, and Rory W. Miezo, 20, of Palatine, Ill. They were charged with violating the federal train wreck statute and with interstate transportation of stolen property.

Damages resulting from the crash were estimated at $300,000.

Fanelli was arrested by FBI agents Thursday when he appeared at an armed forces induction center in downtown Chicago. Miezo has not been apprehended.

The grand jury recommended that bond be set at $4,000 for Miezo and $75,000 for Fanelli.

Wisconsin UCC Convention Set June 18-20 at LU

The ninth annual meeting of the United Church of Christ in Wisconsin will be held Friday through June 20 at Lawrence University.

The Wisconsin Conference of the United Church consists of 297 congregations representing 98,000 members.

Its 1971 meeting will feature eight "issue-oriented groups" designed to give participants an opportunity to participate in shaping the program of the church, rather than just hear it.

Among the program participants are the Rev. Jack Yates, assistant to the national president of the UCC, the Rev. Harry Applewhite and the Rev. Alexander Harper, members of the denomination's Council for Christian Social Action.

The Rev. Ralph P. Ley, president of the Wisconsin Conference, will speak at 7:45 p.m. Friday on the state of the conference. His will be the only formal speech of the convention.

The United Church of Christ was formed in 1957 by a union of the Congregational Christian Churches and the Evangelical and Reformed Church. Its Wisconsin Conference was formed in 1962.

Increase Reported In State; Milwaukee Level Decreases

The Fox Valley avoided the unemployment increase experienced by the state during May but it still tops Wisconsin's jobless rate.

Statewide, the rate rose from 5.2 to 5.5 per cent, after seasonal adjustments, but the Valley rate remained at about 6 per cent last month.

The actual number of unemployed workers in Wisconsin dropped from 99,300 to 93,700—but a much sharper drop usually is expected because of seasonal work opening more jobs.

In the Milwaukee area, the employment rate dropped slightly. Robert Jones, Appleton, supervisor of employer relations and placement of the Wisconsin State Employment Service, that the Appleton-Neenah-Menasha area office had 3,362 active applications for employment at the end of May compared with 3,617 at the end of April and 2,283 at the end of May, 1970. He noted that part- and short-time employment applicants grew from 451 to 531 during May—not a major increase considering the arrival of vacation for high school and college students. On the area's unemployment, Jones noted that the paper companies haven't recalled laid-off workers as quickly as had been hoped, and the trade strikes also have affected employment. Statewide, the total employment increased from 1,826,500 to 1,853,000. Farm employment was 175,000 up 2,000 from April but down 5,000 from May, 1970. The number of factory jobs in the state climbed from 472,000 in April to 473,900, still 20,000 below the level of the previous May.

Maid of honor was Miss Mary Luljak. Mrs. LeRoy Beck was bridesmaids with junior attendants Peggy and Richard Vock.

Best man was Lee LeMoine with LeRoy Beck as groomsmen. Thomas Vock and Ronald Viaene ushered.

Honeymoon Destination Still Mystery

WASHINGTON (AP) — Tricia and Edward Cox's whereabouts remained a mystery today as President Nixon's daughter and son-in-law continued their honeymoon.

The newlyweds left the White House Saturday evening, just hours after the wedding ceremony.

There was speculation the couple spent Saturday night at the presidential retreat at Camp David in the nearby Maryland mountains.

Workmen began dismantling the Rose Garden wedding setting even before all the 400 wedding guests had departed Saturday evening. By Sunday, the last of the elaborate decorations were removed.

The Nixon's had a late Sunday morning coffee gathering of about 30 relatives and friends in their White House family quarters.

Correction

In the weddings of Sunday's Post-Crescent the names of Mrs. Mark Christenson and Mrs. Allyn B. Christensen were inadvertently switched under two pictures. Mrs. Mark Christenson is the former Alison Jean Neuman and Mrs. Allyn B. Christensen is the former Doreen Kay Wenzel.

Mr. and Mrs. Harry Ressiman

63 Years Later, Anniversary

Harry Ressiman claimed Miss Sarah Spector as his bride during ceremonies at Asmedrish Agodel Synagogue, 14th and Union streets, Chicago, Ill.

That is probably how the announcement would have read on June 14, 1908 when they were married. But that was 63 years ago when bride and bridegroom in tintype fashion boarded a horse drawn carriage leading an entourage that carried them to their reception at Lessing Club House.

Mr. Ressiman, stately in his formal black frock coat, trousers, top hat and spats, and his lovely bride in a layered lace gown and flower accented veil were on pins and needles before their marriage. The reason? They had made their bridal attire.

A tailor since boyhood, Mr. Ressiman and his wife arrived in Appleton during their honeymoon where he pursued his profession and continues to do so at age 86. While he begins his daily toil at 6 a.m., his wife at 81 goes about her housework, bakes bread and gardens.

As for their life in Appleton, "It's a good place to live and bring up a family," the Ressimans agree.

They have two daughters: Mrs. Sander Rosenblum, Milwaukee and Mrs. Ben Rusky, Appleton; two grandsons and two great granddaughters.

Right Ingredients Make Magazine Successful

NEW YORK, N.Y. — Those interested in the ingredients for making a successful mass circulation woman's magazine might do well to look at the recipe served up by editor Geraldine Rhoads of Women's Day.

Her formula attracts over 7 million readers monthly and this, in turn, has attracted advertisers like eager suitors.

Celebrating advertising revenue and page gains for the fourth consecutive year, the January to June period of 1971 saw 462 pages of ads in Women's Day compared with 331 the previous year.

In dollars, this brought $13,723,970 into the coffers of the publication — up from 9,677,979 the year before and, circulation has grown steadily from 6.5 million per month in 1965 to 7.2 million today.

"Woman's Day has been emphasizing service to readers from the start," editor Rhoads says. "We devote ourselves to articles which reach out and into every home on such subjects as food, fashion, furnishings, beauty, and children — and this emphasis has helped us increase our popularity with today's young homemaker — the better educated woman searching for ideas to put to work for her."

According to Peter A. Bonanni, advertising director, the magazine has been steadily increasing its pages of editorial service material. Typical was its prize winning editorial, titled, "How Can I Make Myself Useful," and which was lauded by the National Conference of Christians and Jews.

Launched in 1934 as a four-page menu leaflet stuffed in paper bags by the A & P Tea Co., it was purchased in 1958 by Fawcett Publications, which vastly increased its circulation. George H. Allen, publisher and vice president of Fawcett's magazine division, kept Woman's Day edited by a woman at a time when most women's service magazines were dominated by men.

Under Editor Rhoads, the magazine published the first article on macrame — and told women how to do it. Macrame is a coarse lace made by knotting threads or cords in a geometrical pattern. It established instructions for macrame which have become widely accepted.

Monthly menus, featuring foods that are plentiful and inexpensive, enable housewives to save countless dollars each month. These menus are realistically planned in the magazines' three kitchens, as are all food features. All decorating stories are photographed in the Woman's Day studio, and all craft and building ideas are tested in the magazine's workshop, staffed with design specialists, carpenters and skilled craftsmen.

Many of the most successful Woman's Day articles are reprinted in booklet form. Through these women can get "150 Sewing Tips" by sewing editor Mary Johnson to information on "How to Repair, Refinish and Reupholster Small Chairs." "We believe readers want Woman's Day topical to the point," Editor Rhoads says.

Even though we are attracting growing numbers of affluent married homemakers having incomes of $19,000-$25,000, we see nothing incongruous in an article describing 150 Christmas gifts in the $1-$10 price range. Everybody is concerned with saving money today, perhaps more than ever before."

Editor Rhoads went on to say that the other major standard of her readers "is the desire for quality products — and they count on us to guide them to furniture and decorating values which will make their homes pleasant and attractive day in and day out."

She adds, "Consumerism is not new to us. Our readers have always been uppermost in our minds when planning editorial features. The items featured have been carefully selected by our editorial staff and must be available nationally... there are few exceptions. In this manner we can service our readers through local retailers. After all, service is what Woman's Day is all about."

She concludes, "Unless coverage stimulates and helps the reader, it's not going to do anything for magazine sales, for manufacturers, retailers or advertisers. It's got to do something for the reader first."

Disarming Bedeviled By China Emergence

EDITOR'S NOTE—You take mer president of the Hudson In-stitute, a research organization, marked: "All the Russians have a dash of ideology and available the world has become some- the theories on sovereignty. You what multipolar as concerns the square Russians off against strategic nuclear matters, and Pentagon panics." Americans, and then find Mao it is likely to become more so in Tse-tung on the horizon. The world can only guess what the recipe will yield, but here is an analysis of how some of the ingredients may interact. The article is the second of two ap- praising the prospects as China begins to emerge as the third side of a triangle of superpow- ers.

At present, the Russians and Americans are concerned chief-ly with one another's huge ar- maments. That standoff has pro- duced an uneasy peace by men- ace as each side strives to maintain, as a minimum, equal- ity of destructive power. For years the two superpowers were caught, as it trapped, in what had the look of a mutual deter- rence madness.

While China remained on the outside looking in, the race seemed to develop its own runa- way logic. In 1957 the Russian launch of Sputnik I, the first earth satellite, touched off a "missile gap" panic in the Unit- ed States. In reality, there was no such gap, but by the time that was realized generally, the Americans had built, the Rus- sians had responded—and the race for overkill was on full blast.

Cuban Crisis
The 1963 partial ban on nu- clear tests, coming on the heels of a nuclear war scare produced by the Cuba missile crisis, failed to decelerate the race. Despite the shock of the Cuba crisis, the world was edged to- ward the brink yet again, in 1967. During the Arab-Israeli war the Americans and Rus- sians averted a showdown, per- haps narrowly.

In the view of one prominent nuclear scientist, Dr. Ralph Lapp, the race produced a situa- tion in which technology seemed out of control, dominated not by men but by a sort of inhuman, insane logic of its own.

The Russians, noting long- range U.S. punch, built a defens- ive missile system to protect Moscow. By American reckon- ing, that reduced U.S. "deter- rent credibility" and Washing- ton sought more offensive clout.

Super Weapons Race
After 19 months of squabbling at SALT over how to blunt the terrifying threat of a superwea- pons race seeming to escalate itself automatically, a ray of hope has appeared. President Nixon indicates a treaty is pos- sible on how to deal with defens- ive missile systems and sug- gests a possibility also of some sort of understanding on re- straint in producing offensive rockets.

But there would be an impetus for renewed arms competition should either Moscow or Wash- ington of both feel a need of more shield against a burgeon- ing Communist Chinese arsenal.

Ever since the nuclear age be- gan a quarter-century ago, Mos- cow has striven to match U.S. might. Each time the Russians pulled close, Washington felt constrained to build again for clear and unquestioned superi- ority in kill power. Much of that time, huge China occupied the role of spectator.

That has changed
Multipolar Concerns
With the advent of China as a nuclear power," says Donald G. Brennan, member and former president of the Hudson In-stitute, a research organization, marked: "All the Russians have a dash of ideology and available the world has become some- the theories on sovereignty. You what multipolar as concerns the square Russians off against strategic nuclear matters, and Pentagon panics." Americans, and then find Mao it is likely to become more so in Tse-tung on the horizon. The world can only guess what the recipe will yield, but here is an analysis of how some of the ingredients may interact. The article is the second of two ap- praising the prospects as China begins to emerge as the third side of a triangle of superpow- ers.

Still, he speculated, Nixon must have had reason for op- timistic announcements on the SALT prospects. If the Presi- dent could bring off a strategic arms production cutback, Lapp said, it could rank as an achievement of the century. It could be equally that for the So- viet leadership.

But the prize is elusive.
China's assertion of her place in the power triangle conceiv- ably could upset SALT by provid- ing a new spur for American and Soviet deployment of mis- siles. The Soviet military al- ready is growing. Moscow's military press warns: "Our pre- paredness to support real meas- ures for disarmament must match... our preparedness for any turn in the development of events."

Bewildering Policy
Moscow has been pursuing a sometimes bewildering policy, blending promise of detente with denunciation and veiled threat. Some analysts believe Moscow wants to "Finlandize" Western Europe—that is, neutralize it—and, after reduc- ing U.S. authority and influence in Europe, to devote more atten- tion to dealing with the Chinese in Asia.

China's diplomacy also has been perplexing of late. It has involved the "Ping-Pong" tech- nique of people-to-people smiles against a background of unre- lenting tirade against the U.S., Soviet and Japanese govern- ments. While obviously trying to improve its image and gain wider recognition, Peking retreats not an inch from total support for violent revolution and guer- rilla war.

Red China's nuclear punch is negligible compared with the enormous might of the Ameri- cans and Russians. But the Or- iental colossus, with three-quar- ters of a billion people, can boast an arsenal and a growing stable of delivery vehicles. That gives wallop to a diplomacy aimed at achieving U.N. mem- bership, a goal now clearly in sight.

Quit Asia
China's great leap forward to- ward superpower rank after 20 years of isolation takes on mean- ing in the light of a U.S. com- mitment to quit the Asian main- land. Asian leaders, pondering the imponderables, can find the change startling, if not dismay- ing. Though they may have crit- icized the American role in Asia, they can feel naked with- out a U.S. presence and proba- bly even now seek measures to placate their huge Communist neighbor.

Domestic issues intrude more and more with U.S. foreign and "China factor" might in the long run "push the United States and the Soviet Union to- ward sanity."

Expressing a similar idea, Brennan of the Hudson Institute remarks: "There is no reason for both of us to be insane, even though there is a fashion among politicians and analysts on both sides toward insanity."

man commentator recently noted a "creeping erosion of confidence" in the continuity and reliability of U.S. policy.

Tactical Weapons
What, some ask, if the current U.S. mood persuaded Washing- ton to retire gradually to pre- ponderant reliance on strategic nuclear clout and a buildup of smaller tactical nuclear weapons to make up for the with- drawal of U.S. troops? That, in the view of experts, would raise a risk that tactical weapons would come into play and threaten escalation to the strategic level.

Both sides at the SALT talks are acutely aware of all the possibilities, as they are aware, also, of the two times in recent years when the Russians and Americans edged close to the rim of nuclear calamity. Should China so complicate the picture that SALT fails, what then?

A Yugoslav commentator speculated recently that the and more with U.S. foreign and "China factor" might in the long run "push the United States and the Soviet Union to- ward sanity."

Expressing a similar idea, Brennan of the Hudson Institute remarks: "There is no reason for both of us to be insane, even though there is a fashion among politicians and analysts on both sides toward insanity."

40.9 Per Cent Telephone Company's Revenues Increase

Total operating revenues grew 40.9 per cent during 1970 for Telephone and Data Systems Inc., Chicago-based parent firm of Stockbridge and Sherwood Telephone Co.

LeRoy T. Carlson, Stockbridge and Sherwood Telephone presi- dent and major stockholder in Telephone and Data Systems, said revenues increased from $3,217,487 in 1969 to $4,536,165. The firm operates in Stock- bridge, Tisch Mills, Hilbert and Sherwood. It operates several services in Wisconsin and adja- cent states and acquired several more companies last year.

Net earnings rose from $99,783 to $327,698 during 1970, Carlson reported at the annual meeting. Assets increased from $19,492,515 to $26,509,439.

Expansion also was reported as the total number of stations, or telephones, rose from 35,645 to 43,753, a 22.7 per cent increase.

Outstanding shares, as of March 31, were 2,096,712.

Lead Is Poisoning Animals in Zoo

By ALTON BLAKESLEE
AP Science Editor

NEW YORK (AP) — A sick black leopard, his dead twin brother, and other zoo animals seem to be sounding an alarm bell that humans are endangered by lead in the air, pathologists cautioned today.

The main source of this lead seems to be gasoline fumes and industrial operations, they said.

The ailing leopard—nicknamed "Mr. Leo Pard"—is being treated at the New York Medical College to rid his body of high concentrations of lead for the second time in his 18 months of life.

He was recently brought in again, suffering from convulsions, from the Staten Island Zoo in New York City, where his twin brother died last November. An autopsy found that animal "loaded with lead." Cats lick their fur, which can attract lead or other heavy elements in the atmosphere.

Death Warrant

Sending "Mr. Leo Pard" back to the zoo again could be his death warrant from a third round of lead poisoning, said Dr. Ralph Strebel, one of the pathologists.

The animal's name comes from a laboratory technician who analyzed a blood specimen marked "Leopard," thought it had to be a human patient named Leo Pard and so marked his return report.

Other big cats—lions, tigers, jaguars—at the Staten Island Zoo have been found to have elevated levels of lead and zinc in their stools and hair, and so to a lesser degree have big cats at the Bronx Zoo 15 miles away, said Strebel, associate professor of pathology at the medical college. He is project director of a comparative pathology program designed to benefit both humans and animals.

Danger Outdoors

Bobcats, living outdoors at the zoo, have more lead than cats living inside, he said. Some monkeys had significant lead concentrations, so did some snakes that died of starvation because of some illness—whether due to lead poisoning or not. The malady caused them to turn on their backs and they couldn't seek food.

A fellow hospital patient with Leo Pard is a big owl whose feathers are falling out—whether from lead or not has not been determined.

Lead was detected in mice found dead inside and just outside the Staten Island Zoo, said Dennis F. Craston, Toxicologist in the chief medical examiner's office here and a member of the medical college staff.

He found elevated lead content in animals and in grass, leaves, bricks and air exhaust ducts of new buildings.

Paints containing lead—including some latex paints supposedly free of lead—on walls or bars that animals can rub against or lick are probably the second main source of the lead, Craston said.

These new findings "are an alarm bell for people of Staten Island at least," said Dr. David Spiro, chairman of the college's pathology department. "No amount of radiation or of heavy metals does any physical good—all are bad."

Strebel said many thousands of people may suffer from sub-clinical effects of lead and other heavy metals. These effects could include lethargy, a slowing of nerve conduction, vague pains, and interference in protein synthesis and enzyme activity in the body, he and Craston said.

Body Content

The human body content of lead is higher now than 10 years ago, they agreed. Traffic patrolmen and people working in certain industries have been found to have particularly elevated contents of lead in their blood.

What this means in terms of human health is debated.

Illness, mental retardation and death have been attributed to the chewing of old lead-containing paints by young children.

Young animals in the zoo seem to be more susceptible to lead poisoning than older animals, said Dr. Edward Garner, director of animal care in the project.

The comparative pathology program, on which a progress report was released today, has several objectives, one of which is to determine to what extent zoo animals might be a warning system for human danger from pollution, somewhat like the canaries once taken down into mines to warn of dangerous gases, Strebel said.

Another is to establish the profiles of normal health, like temperature and blood chemistries, of various animals in order to better diagnose and treat their illnesses.

The animal-human pathology study operating on a low budget, includes five city zoos—Staten Island, the Bronx, Central Park, Flushing and Prospect Park.

Virginia Official Reynolds Heir Dies

RICHMOND, Va. (AP) — Last month, Gov. J. Sargeant Reynolds is dead at 34, the victim of complications arising from a brain tumor.

The heir to the Reynolds Metals Co. fortune died Sunday in a New York hospital where he had been undergoing radiation treatment for the inoperable tumor periodically for less than a year.

His body was to be returned here today.

The son of Richard S. Reynolds Jr., president and chairman of the board of Reynolds Metals, he entered the Neurological Institute at New York's Columbia-Prosytherian Medical Center for the last time early in the month.

His parents and his wife of less than two years were called to New York Friday when his condition took a turn for the worse. They were there when he died.

Doctors at the hospital said his death was caused by pneumonia, contracted last week when his resistance was low because of the malignancy.

Elected to Virginia's House of Delegates in 1965, young Reynolds moved up to the Virginia Senate in 1967 and won the lieutenant governor's chair in 1969.

Political observers considered the New York native a heavy favorite for the Democratic nomination for governor in 1973.

Potentially Poisonous Pottery Can Slip Past Inspectors

WASHINGTON (AP) — Food and Drug Administration officials estimate they have headed off more than 440 shipments of dangerously contaminated imported pottery in a little more than a year.

But the limitations of the FDA's screening process for foreign as well as domestic pottery is illustrated by the recent recalls of pottery already on the market. In two of the cases the recalls were spurred by deaths from lead poisoning.

The contamination found most often is lead used in various salt forms to give pottery a glazed finish. Other heavy metals; cadmium, cobalt, chromium and tin, also crop up in the pottery coloring.

If the pottery is finished in underheated ovens the metals can be extracted—or leached—by such acidic foods as fruit juices, soft drinks, wine, cider, coffee, vinegar, sauerkraut and cooked fruit and tomato products.

The heavy metals are cumulative poisons, which can be just as deadly in small doses over a long time as in one big dose. The FDA has set the safe level for leachable lead in pottery at 7 parts per million.

When FDA inspectors recently checked a batch of cups and saucers from Italy, they found the samples averaged 534 parts per million.

The blocked imports—400 for high lead levels and 40 for cadmium—have come from 19 countries, according to an article by inspectors Benjamin Krinitz and Robert K. Hering in the latest issue of "FDA Papers." Each shipment can represent 10,000 pieces of pottery.

"Although FDA knew that reports that a California family had toxic amounts of lead could be of five almost died from products under certain conditions, the agency was not really aware until a little over a year ago of the extent and seriousness of this problem involving handcrafted in three months for Howard, Mexico pitcher.

In February last year, the agency urged families to stop using Mexican pottery. Its tests showed 26 of 28 samples contained leachable lead, the agency said.

A year later the FDA announced a public recall of Italian pottery distributed by Holtzman Co. of Stamford, Conn. It was the second recall and the agency got Metlox Pottery, Inc., of Manhattan Beach, Calif., to recall eight of the firm's 56 patterns.

Last month Sears Roebuck and Co. recalled 2,000 sets of imported Japanese dinnerware.

The FDA screening program includes limited random sampling from retail stores and imports. But, Hering says of import programs, "It's impossible to check every entry."

The U.S. Pottery Association conducts a voluntary surveillance program under which participants, for a fee, send samples periodically to commercial laboratories for testing. About 20 of 85 domestic producers are in the program.

Hering and Krinitz note, however, "There are tens of thousands of amateur potters and small-scale studio potters in addition to the major firms, and FDA recognizes that these may present a far greater problem than the larger manufacturer."

Import surveillance is also augmented by the industry. Hering said all the exporters from Japan and some in other countries pretest pottery for lead content. If imported pottery is accompanied by a document showing such tests have been made and passed, the FDA automatically waves it in without further testing.

Preference for Cattle Owners Reagan Client of Tax Shelter Specialists

SACRAMENTO, Calif. (AP) — Gov. Ronald Reagan, who paid 1970 because of "business reverses" he wouldn't explain.

Murphy said he bought 20 bulls for Reagan at $450 each my business and I intend to continue with it even though it is a relatively small investment."

Oppenheimer Industries' application to operate in California says its clients must have a net worth of at least $500,000—not counting household effects—or at least $100,000 while being in a federal-state tax bracket of more than 50 per cent.

The Bee story quoted an Oppenheimer booklet that outlined the legal tax shelter advantages to investing in cattle:

The Bee said reporters were unable to determine how many brand in Nevada, although the Nevada registration was not re- by Oppenheimer. But it quoted Gary Murphy, an Oppenheimer ranch manager in Montana, as the story was published, Reagan didn't owe any state taxes for saying he took care of 13 Re-

Growing China Power Forces Re-Evaluation

EDITOR'S NOTE — For years two superpowers have been arrayed in a tug of war, Moscow vs. Washington. Now China is about to make it a three-way competition, and the original contestants must speculate how the pulling and hauling will go under the gathering clouds of potential destruction. Some things the development may mean are discussed in this analysis, first of two articles, by a writer who has closely watched Communist maneuvers as World War II turned into cold war and evolved into the era of A&M and SALT.

By WILLIAM L. RYAN
AP Special Correspondent

One of these days—perhaps fairly soon—Red China is expected to lob an intercontinental ballistic missile into the sea.

It will make an enormous splash. As the innocent click of Ping-Pong paddles did politically, its ominous roar militarily will remind the world that the perilous game of world power politics has become a triangular affair. China has broken out of her shell and is taking a hand.

"The shadow of that missile arc will be permanent," says Dr. Ralph Lapp, a noted nuclear physicist long associated with study of the problems involved with superweaponry. He feels Red China, unlike the two secondary nuclear club members, Britain and France, will be a truly credible nuclear power because of her vastness, staking a claim to superpower status.

This is bound to have immense impact on the shape of things to come in the remaining three decades of the 20th century. China, believed by experts ready to test her ICBM when the moment is right psychologically, already is a spectral third party at SALT, the Soviet-American talks on strategic arms limitation.

New Dimension

China's missile will add a new dimension to what, for years, has been a two-way competition between the United States and the Soviet Union.

The world, not without some terrifying moments, survived the first quarter-century of the nuclear age. President Nixon expressed hope for a shift from confrontation to an era of negotiation. There is much talk of limiting strategic arms, establishing European security, restoring Asian peace and fruitful concourse among nations.

But while there are hopeful signs, today's confrontation remains frightening, full of deadly terms which have become commonplace clichés. People have become accustomed to a balance of terror, inured to such phrases as assured destruction, first- and second-strike capability, mutual deterrence, damage-limiting capacity, acceptable losses and such notions as the "factor of five," meaning that certain defensive measures might, in case of nuclear attack on the United States, reduce the death risk from 100 million to 20 million.

Invariable Reaction

Today's world is one in which three huge nations eye one another with suspicion. If any of the three makes even a hesitant gesture toward another, the third invariably reacts with alarm.

This is the sort of world which now is looking at the beginning of a new stage of power alignment. For decades, while the contest was mainly between Russians and Americans, the main theater was the Atlantic area. Now the focus seems to be shifting toward a Pacific cockpit complicated by an eager and dynamic Japan seeking leverage for aims of her own in Asia.

China as a prospective enormous market of 750 million people is attractive bait for Japanese, Russians, Europeans and Americans alike. At the same time, China raises nightmarish fears, especially for Asian leaders. Filipinos, Thais, Malaysians, Indians eye China nervously, aware that she has as yet displayed no sign of backing away from supporting guerrilla movements throughout the so-called "third world."

Immediate Aim

Red China's immediate aim, many analysts feel, is to become a member of the United Nations, but only if Chiang Kai-shek's Nationalists are expelled. Her Ping-Pong diplomacy of smiles for American and other visitors appeared to have been a thrust in that direction. This presents a dilemma for the United States and some of the Asian nations who have long had diplomatic and economic ties with Chiang's Formosa-based government.

But Peking poses big problems for the Russians, too, particularly in view of the military clashes on Soviet-Chinese borders two years ago and in the light of Chinese territorial claims against the Soviet Union.

Not only has China smashed the myth of a world Communist monolith. She now is upsetting Soviet projections of long-term Chinese-American hostility. Angry the Russians are accusing Peking of having engaged in "sham anti-Americanism" while plotting to collude with the United States. From the Soviet standpoint, it would have been much better had China remained isolated and limited to a minor role in global power poli-world body.

Soviets Not Eager

The Russians, despite all they might have said in years gone by about Red China's "legitimate rights" to representation in the United Nations, have shown themselves far from eager to speed up the process.

In 1969 the Russians didn't bother to speak in the U.N. debate on China's claim. At the 1970 session, the Russians were not listed to speak, and their representative did so only as an afterthought, at the last moment, when it became clear that Red China's adherents would amass a simple majority. As the leader of the Communist world, the Russians could not afford politically to avoid standing up to be counted. Even then, the support was limited to lip-service.

It seemed likely that the Russians shuddered at the idea that Red China, with its huge potential for creating difficulty for Soviet aspirations, would occupy a seat on the Security Council, which makes whatever important decisions come from the world body.

Possible Showdown

In recent times, lower-level Russians at the United Nations and in Washington have poked and prodded for information on prospective American attitudes toward the possibility of a Chinese-Russian showdown. This may have been done deliberately to confuse and mislead the Americans, but the Russians didn't seem to mind what conclusions their hearers might draw.

The Kremlin also seems to view Chinese policy as a threat to Soviet domination in Eastern Europe. Moscow appears to suspect, with some justification, that Peking's gestures to Yugoslavia, along with its ardor for Romania and its alliance with Albania, represent an attempt to build an anti-Soviet front. All three of those nations have felt the pressure of Soviet military threats at one time or another. Alignments with the Chinese could tend to make those states more secure in their avoidance of total Soviet domination.

Veteran observers of Communist affairs think China's increasing role as counterweight between the two military giants is posing an urgent need for careful reassessment of U.S. power positions.

Zbigniew Brzezinski, a frequent adviser in Washington on Communist policy, wrote in the periodical Foreign Policy: "Washington has been clearly jolted by the sudden rush of recognition of the Peking government and by the high probability that Peking may soon be seated in the United Nations at the expense of the Nationalist Chinese government." Now, he wrote, the Nixon administration had the problem of devising strategy to meet the dilemma in the light of the emergent relationship among Washington, Peking and Moscow.

"The various unilateral gestures so far adopted by the Nixon administration can therefore be seen as an effort to obtain eventually some flexibility in that triangular relationship, even if these gestures by themselves do not materially improve the American-Chinese relationship in the short run. The administration certainly realizes that in such a triangular relationship, intense hostility between any two automatically benefits the third. This puts a premium on restraint on the part of all three toward one another."

Perhaps that is a hopeful aspect of the three powers' relationship, a sort of built-in deterrent against rash policy.

Nixon says he has taken notice of the "significant change" among U.N. members on the issue of Chinese admission; his administration is analyzing the situation in consultation with the Chiang government before deciding a position. Whatever it decides, the going is likely to be difficult, since Red China's position seems to be getting stronger all the time.

In the long run, whether China's emergence is good or bad from the American standpoint is going to depend on interactions in the power triangle. One thing it clearly will do will be to remind both Russians and Americans that a third party stands by, ready and willing to pick up the pieces if the two giants should collide.

Missing Parrot Found; Policeman Is Bitten

ASHLAND, Ky. (AP) — "Help me, help me," screamed the runaway as a policeman approached.

It looked like the end of a 15-hour search for the wayward ward of an Ashland couple.

As Patrolman Bill Steele entered a residence to take charge of the runaway, he was bitten on the hand.

Steele went to a hospital for treatment and the runaway to police headquarters.

Records showed no charge was placed against the parrot.

PUBLIC NOTICE!

CONSTRUCTION USERS whose work is being impeded by the strike of carpenters belonging to local unions of the Fox River Valley—AND ...
CONSTRUCTION EMPLOYEES whose income is lessened by the same strike.

QUESTION: ARE THE DEMANDS OF THE FOX RIVER VALLEY CARPENTERS DISASTROUS? INFLATIONARY?

UNTRUE RUMORS

The Presidential Directive providing for stabilization of wages and prices in the construction industry is meaningless.

The contractors are treating the carpenter craft unfairly and are offering no wage increases nor contract changes.

The carpenters under the Presidential Directive of March 29, 1971, are entitled to an equity adjustment in addition to the allowable increase of approximately 6%.

The carpenters requested adjustment to Total Wage Package is fair and non-inflationary.

HERE ARE THE STRAIGHT FACTS

The Presidential Directive issued by President Nixon is meaningful. Labor Agreements reached after March 29, 1971 must be submitted to a Craft Disputes Board and/or to the Wage Stabilization Committee and must be approved before newly negotiated wage or fringe benefits can be paid.

The negotiating committees representing unions and management mutually agreed that there would be no discussion of economics prior to agreement on all non-economic language. Three meetings were held prior to the union's invoking strike action. At the time of the unions calling for strike action the committee representing the carpenters had rejected each and every request for language revisions made by the Management Negotiating Committee and were still asking for revisions to:

These unresolved demands for language revision made it impossible for the management committee to make any economic offer whatsoever and still honor the agreement reached for "procedures" during negotiations.

The total Compensation Package paid the Carpenter Craft has increased more rapidly since the stabilized period of 1960 to 1968

An increase of approximately 6% to Roofers in the Manitowoc Area was rejected by the Committee.

1. Recognition, Assignment and Scope of Agreement Language.
2. Union Security Language.
3. Hiring Hall Language.
4. Contracting, Sub-Contracting and Prefabrication Languages. (This language could conceivably impose the conditions of our contract on Millwork Manufacturers).
5. Arbitration Language.
6. Unemployment, and Workmen's Compensation and Indemnification Language. (We believe these revisions should be made by our legislators in Madison if they are desirable, not by labor agreement).

mentioned in the directive than all but one other craft employed directly by general contractors. The Carpenters increase of 40c per hour effective December 1, 1970, was not received by the other general construction crafts. Therefore, little if any equity adjustment can be granted under the criteria of the Presidential Directive.

The one year Demands made by the committee representing the carpenters include:

1. Increased Wage $.38/hr.
 2. Increased Pension Contributions 35/hr.
 3. Increased Holiday and Vacation Contribution per hour 36/hr.
- $1.09/hr.

Non Wage Economic Demands

1. Coffee Break, 10 min. equivalent to approx. .15/hr.
2. Time to Pick Up Tools etc., 10 min. 15/hr.
3. Travel and Subsistence
 - a. Travel Allowance 13c/mile
 - b. Travel Pay 15 min./every 10 miles
 - c. Subsistence $12.00/day for a Maximum of $72.00/week

Considering only subsistence and ignoring weekend allowance this would cost $1.50/hr. for each man receiving subsistence.

Special Hazard Pay:

- a. Increase Hazardous Scaffold premium from 10c/hr. to 50c/hr.
- b. Increase Premium for handling creosoted materials from 20c/hr. to 50c/hr.
- c. Increase Millwright and Pile Driving Premium from 25c to 50c/hr.

Union Dues:

Pay Union Permit fees for men working outside his home jurisdiction.

Overtime Premium Pay:

Present contract requires Payment of 1½ times hourly rate for week day overtime and Double time on Saturdays, Sundays and Holidays.

Union Demands Require:

Payment of Double time for first 2 hrs. of Overtime; Triple Time, 2nd 2 hrs.; 4 Times 3rd & 4th, 2 hrs., and 6 Times thereafter on week days.

Other demands which will increase costs include employer carried insurance on carpenter's tools, added feather bedding by increasing number of required sub-foreman etc.

ECONOMIC PACKAGE OFFERED BY CONTRACTORS

We have offered to increase the Carpenter Economic Package by 39c per hour with the provision that the 39c can be used only for:

1. Increasing Wage Rate
2. Increasing Health & Welfare Cont.
3. Increasing Pension Cont.
4. Increasing Vacation Cont.

This offer was made with the understanding that it would be presented to the membership for acceptance. This offer was rejected by the unions committee.

We believe this offer to be as much as is permissible under the Presidential Directive.

If you apply the economic demands of the union to a Journeyman Carpenter working on a pile driving crew traveling 40 miles to his job the following is a comparison of the cost based on the expired contract and the demands of the unions.

COMPARISON OF COMPENSATION

Present Expiring Contract Per Hr.	Union Demands Per Hr.
$6.00 Basic Wage	$6.38
.15 Pension Contribution	.50
.20 Vacation Contribution	.56
.15 Health & Welfare Contribution	.15
.02 Apprenticeship Contribution	.02
Cost of—
— Coffee Break	.15
— Tool Pick Up Time	.15
— Subsistence	1.50
.25 Pile Driving Rate	.50

If the Journeyman Carpenter could work at this Job 48 weeks per year, 40 hours per week this compensation would increase from $12,998.40 to $18,835.20 and he could still enjoy 4 weeks Vacation.

Boss, His Family Off Limits

DEAR ANN LANDERS: This is the first time I got so mad I knew I had to write to you, although I've been tempted several times. I am furious at that dame who signed herself "First Class Secretary." If you ask me she is a lousy secretary. I strongly suspect her interest in her boss goes beyond business.

I am also employed by "a wonderful guy" but he is married which means he is off-limits so far as I am concerned. It doesn't make a difference to me how many times a day his wife calls him. It's my job to put the calls through. If he doesn't want to talk to her he can tell her so. It is also none of my business how much time the boss' wife spends at this office. If she wants to bring a bedroll down here and sleep on the floor, it's O.K. with me.

If the secretary who wrote, want to be "first-class" she can start by learning to keep her nose and her mouth out of her boss's family affairs. — Twenty Years on the Job Without Trouble

Dear No Trouble: One of the cardinal rules for being a first-class person — as well as a first-class Secretary is to M.Y.O.B. I am not surprised that you have been "Twenty Years on the Job Without Trouble." Thanks for writing.

DEAR ANN LANDERS: My husband, who is a handsome, virile, intelligent and gifted man in his middle years, has dirty literature hidden all over the place. When I say "dirty" I don't mean just girly pictures. I mean the filthiest hard-core pornography you can imagine. Several months ago I complained about the stuff coming to the house. I learned last week by accident that he is now receiving this garbage at his office.

Is he nuts or is the world sick? I've suggested psychiatric help but he says there is nothing wrong with him. He claims I am narrow-minded, provincial, and hung-up.

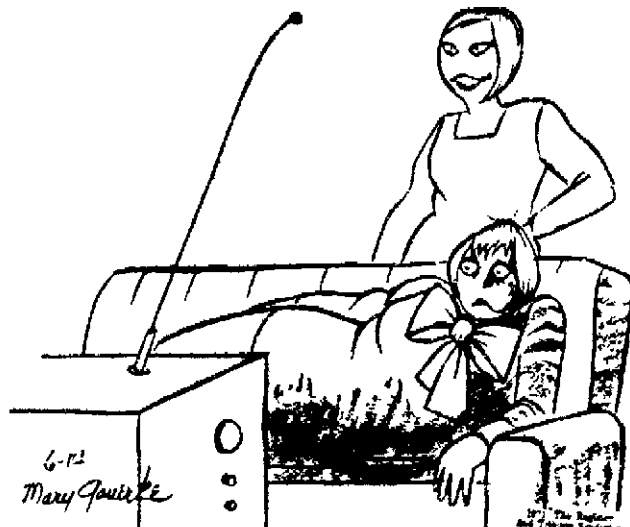

Our children are grown. I hate to think of spending the rest of my life with an old fool who gets his kicks from looking at dirty pictures. You usually have a good answer. Do you have one for him? — Numb

DEAR ANN LANDERS: Our grandson will be five years old soon. My husband is crazy about the child. We are having an argument over the boy's birthday gift. My husband has selected two fancy toy guns from a catalogue. I am opposed to guns for children. In my opinion, there is too much violence on TV, in the movies — everywhere one looks.

My husband says cops and robbers and Indians and cowboys are as American as apple pie. He insists it is a healthy way for kids to get rid of excess energy. What do you say? — Against It

Dear Ag: I say banana oil. Games and sports are much better outlets for youthful energy than make-believe killing. I suggest swimming, hiking, roller skating, bicycling and ping-pong. I am appalled by games that make murder "fun." Such games desensitize children and teach them to accept violence and killing as part of their everyday lives.

Drinking may be "in" to the kids you run with — but it can put you "out" for keeps. You can cool it and stay popular. Read "Booze and You — For Teen-Agers Only." Send 35 cents in coin and a long, self-addressed, stamped envelope with your request.

"The 11 o'clock news wasn't ALL bad. At least it cured your hiccups."

THE ACES ON BRIDGE

World Champions

by IRA G. CORN JR.
TEAM CAPTAIN

The careless and impulsive experienced player occupies a special place in bridge.

Like S. J. Simon's character "Futile Willie," he knows enough about the game to recognize a problem. However, his plan carelessly covers only half the solution.

Today's instructive hand is used by Ace Bob Wolff to demonstrate the necessity for developing a complete plan of play.

king and plays his spade king. West wins the king with the ace and plays a third round of hearts. This removes declarer's entry to dummy while the spade queen blocks the run of the spade suit. Declarer's solution covered only half the problem. Down one!

While declarer's play showed an awareness to the problem, his plan was not complete.

After making the good play of ruffing the third diamond high to create an entry to dummy, declarer should have drawn only one round of trumps before knocking out the spade ace. West would be rendered helpless and could not thwart declarer's plan by the lead of another trump. If he did, declarer would win the trump in his hand, cash the spade queen and then cross to dummy with the trump 10. His two losing clubs would be discarded on the jack and 10 of spades and the contract scored.

Is half a plan better than no plan at all? "Rarely," says Bobby Wolff, "and it's a shame. Seeing the dangers is usually more than half the battle. In today's hand just a little more thought would have made the entire effort worthwhile."

Looking ahead, declarer plans to establish dummy's jack and 10 of spades by discarding two losing clubs. The third diamond was ruffed with a high trump to create an entry in dummy's heart 10. So far, so good.

Executives Criticize Cost of New Consumer Protection Bills

WASHINGTON, D. C. — Proliferation of government consumer activities was criticized by two executives of the home appliance industry at recent Congressional hearings on new consumer protection bills.

Statements were made by Donald Byers, assistant general counsel for The Maytag Company, and by George P. Lamb, general counsel for the Association of Home Appliance Manufacturers at recent hearings on class action and consumer representation legislation, respectively.

Class action legislation would provide means under which all persons harmed by a fraudulent business practice could be compensated under a single federal court action. Proposed legislation (S. 984, S. 1222 and S. 1378) is being studied by the Senate Committee for the Consumer.

Hearings on consumer representation legislation (H.R. 14, H.R. 15, H.R. 16 and H.R. 3808) were held by the House Government Operations Subcommittee.

Both witnesses pointed out that their industry has put a billion appliances in American homes. In addition, it has made extensive provisions for effectively representing and informing consumers about these products and for taking care of complaints about them.

Fraud and deception must, to the extent possible, be eliminated from the marketplace, Byers testified. He warned, however, that proposed class action legislation would duplicate existing government judicial procedures as well as those of industry.

Appliance manufacturers support means for aiding consumers "so long as they promise to be effective and do not threaten disproportionate injury to the nation's judicial system or to the economy," he said.

Lamb also called attention to current government consumer protection activity, noting that there are 1,109 federal consumer programs administered by 57 agencies at an estimated cost of $3 billion annually. There are also numerous state and local programs.

"Continued proliferation of federal activities can only result in confusion and duplication of effort, the cost of which must be borne by the taxpayer and consumer," Lamb said.

Numerous appliance industry programs for consumers were described in detail. They include:

The Association of Home Appliance Manufacturers' program under which it investigates and works toward good practices in appliance advertisements.

Guidelines for appliance advertising some of which have been in effect in the industry for more than 10 years.

A Major Appliance Consumer Action Panel (composed of consumer experts without industry ties) which investigates individual appliance problems and recommends solutions on behalf of consumers to manufacturers of the products involved.

National home appliance conferences which have for the past 25 years provided up-to-date appliance information to persons who communicate with consumers, including educators, extension officials, consumer writers and others.

Distribution for more than 50 years of pamphlets on appliance use and other types of industry-wide consumer information.

These and other activities by appliance industry trade associations and by individual companies have been faithfully serving consumer interests for many years, long before the advent of the current consumer protection movement which has led to class action, consumer representation and other government programs, the industry spokesmen declared.

Meat and Fruit Prices Continue to Go Up

BY SYLVIA PORTER

The slim progress we've made against inflation so far in 1971 has been even more trivial than the official index shows or the White House claims. For a most significant factor slowing down the apparent pace of rise in our cost of living has been this year's sharp drop in mortgage interest rates.

With the decline in mortgage rates included in the Consumer Price Index, the rise in the CPI slowed to an annual rate of under 3 per cent in the four months ended in May.

But with the decline in mortgage rates eliminated from the index, the rise was at an annual rate of about 4½ per cent — back into the intolerable ranges of the past few years.

How many of you have bought a house at this year's low (but still historically steep) interest rates? Not many. While mortgage rates are of course a fact of economic life in the U. S., their short-term ups and downs affect comparatively few of us.

Thus, how many of you can say that your cost of living all sorts of utilities — telephones, electricity, gas — are at all? Not many. Mortgage rates alone have distorted the overall picture.

To give it to you clearly, here's the approximate trend of the CPI with and without mortgage rates.

Period	Rise CPI with Mtg. rates	Rise CPI without Mtg. rates
2nd half '70	4½%	5½%
1st half '70	6%	5½%
1969	6.1%	5.8%

What does all this mean to you, a real-life American living not by an index but by buying real goods and services?

(1) Not nearly as much pro-

gress has been made as any of us have prayed for or anticipated against our virulent inflation — even at the price of an upsurge in joblessness which in some groups has become criminally cruel. And now the pressure in our cost of living will, if anything, be accelerating.

Mortgage rates have bottomed out and well may be on the way up again.

Food price increases are spreading — particularly in meats and fruits — and this really will pinch. The costs of all sorts of utilities — telephones, electricity, gas — are rising.

Wholesale industrial prices are advancing at an annual rate of almost 5 per cent — telegraphing increases in retail prices for durable goods. With food, utilities and mortgage rates added, the cost of living outlook is more dismal than Washington statements have implied.

Recovery Sluggish

(2) At the same time, the recovery from the 1969-70 recession has been disappointingly sluggish and the White House's February optimistic forecasts for '71 appear increasingly dubious.

Businessmen are not expanding their plans to buy plants and equipment. Consumers are spending but you're scarcely on a spree. There's simply not enough bounce in our economy to absorb our growing labor force and the jobless rate has now climbed to a dismaying 6.2 per cent — with the unemployment rates for Vietnam war veterans, especially blacks, unspeakably dreadful.

(3) In bluntest sum, the economic nightmare of recession-inflation which began in 1969 has in turn become a nightmare of slow recovery. Inflation in the second half of 1971. The remedies we have tried have not worked so far, nor do they show signs of working in the future.

New policies to curb price-wage increases must be tried so we can have leeway to revive our economy. The cry for this now crosses all U. S. party lines, echoes in the parliaments of our friends abroad too.

"Incomes policies" to fight inflation may not work either, but at least they must be tried. The whole world is watching and waiting for our President to act.
